NAZIS LAUNCH 'TRAITOR PURGE'

Says Reds Spread 'Isms' In Schoolbooks

DIES' EVIDENCE CITES AUTHORS AS COMMUNISTS

Leading U. S. Educators Asked to Testify at Hearings Next Month.

PROBE NOW UNDERWAY

Accuses Writers of Using False Names to Hide Affiliation With Party.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The Dies committee has uncovered alleged evidence purporting to show that Communist authors have written American school textbooks under assumed names, for the purpose of implanting propaganda in the minds of students, it was disclosed today.

The evidence is expected to be made public in December in a series of committee hearings dealing with Communist propaganda and activities in American schools and colleges.

Educators Called.

Some of the leading educators of the nation have been invited to appear before the committee. Among those expected to be called is Prof. John Dewey, a liberal, who is said to have fought Communist inroads in organizations of professors and teachers.

Committee agents have completed an analysis of textbooks used in many universities and schools in various parts of the country. Subtle propaganda has been introduced in many of them, the agents asserted.

Much of the propaganda, they said, is traceable to known Communist writers. One agent stated that "five or six big Communist writers have even written under false names."

Made 8-Month Probe.

The university and school investigation is in charge of Maj. Hamilton Wilson, of the veterans administration. He is the only employe of a government department loaned to the committee, despite the house resolution calling upon all federal departments to aid the committee in its investigation of un-American activities.

Wilson's investigation lasted eight months, during which he visited universities, colleges and schools from coast to coast. Most of the Communist propaganda was alleged to have been distributed through so-called "Communist front" organizations.

The committee last year heard many charges of Communistic activity in schools in New York.

Boy 'Celebrates' 17th Birthday by Starting Sentence

A Mansfield youth with a mania for stealing bicycles celebrated his 17th birthday today by starting a term in the Boys' Industrial school at Lancaster.

Sentenced yesterday by Judge C. J. Anderson in county juvenile court, the boy, who has been in court 15 times in the past three years, was taken to the industrial school this afternoon by Ralph Carroll, county juvenile officer.

Judge Anderson said the boy confessed the theft of more than a dozen bicycles in the city in recent months. He has been cited repeatedly for the thefts and for truancy and was warned or paroled each time.

The youth's sentence in the industrial school will be for an indeterminate period.

Love Trysts Draw Denial From Sheriff

Bachelor Officer Fights Paternity Charge of Unmarried Mother.

(By United Press)

ELYRIA—Sheriff Carl R. Finegan of Lorain county testified today in his trial on a paternity charge that he never kept love trysts with Mary Bender, a 23-year-old unmarried mother.

The 34-year-old bachelor sheriff kept his eyes on the jurors as he denied Miss Bender's testimony that he had been with her 15 or 20 times. He said he had seen her on only four occasions before she accused him of being the father of her daughter, Patricia Ann, 28 months old.

Finegan wore a blue suit with white pin stripe, a dark tie and white shirt for his courtroom appearance. He referred to the plaintiff alternately as "Mary" and "Miss Bender."

Finegan revealed during his testimony that he had been engaged to marry Miss Marcella Klesh of Amherst for 18 months.

He said he first met Miss Bender at the Lorain home of Ben Harris, chairman of the county Democratic executive committee.

"That was on Sunday morning, June 14, 1936," he said. "Miss Bender's mother and sister were there with her, and Mr. Harris introduced me to them.

"Mary was dressed in a drill uniform of the Knights of St. John. When I was leaving, she asked me to drive her home. I did."

He said he saw her again that afternoon at a political picnic in Ridgeville.

"She came up to me about 6 p. m., said her folks were gone, and asked me to please drive her home," he testified. "I did, letting her out in front of the house, and then I came back to Elyria."

He said he went to the Bender home the night before the 1936 primary eletcion with two other men because "they told me Mr. Bender had a lot of friends and I wanted to get their votes." He said he offered Bender a drink of whisky but drank none himself.

He said Miss Bender was not home that night but that he saw her in November, 1936, when he went to the Bender home looking for Municipal Judge W. P. Duffy of Lorain.

Finegan told the jury that Bender and Judge Duffy went out for a time.

"I sat there with Mary and her

U. S. Professor Says British Violates Neutrals' Rights.

PRINCETON, N. J. —(U.P.)— Dr. Edward S. Corwin, professor of jurisprudence of Princeton university and an authority on international law, said today that Britain's plan to seize German exports violates the rights of neutrals.

The export blockade is "not in accordance with the rules of blockade," Corwin said. "It is clearly a violation of the rights of neutrals, since German exports are bought by neutrals, carried in neutral ships, and are consigned to neutral countries."

He discounted Britain's motives —retaliation for alleged illegal nine-laying—because "international law does not recognize the plea of reprisals as justification for the violation of the rights of neutrals."

The "Fotorelief" map, (top) portrays the sinking of merchant vessels off the east coast of England by floating mines. An Italian steamer, badly damaged by a mine explosion, was the latest victim of the sea warfare today. Fifteen ships have been sunk in the area since last Saturday. At the bottom are shown British mine sweepers at work clearing the shipping lanes in the North sea of the deadly spheres. Inset shows a "captured" mine, indicated by the arrow.

Battery D Goes To 'War' As Ohio Maneuvers Begin Today

Battery D of the 135th Field Artillery, Mansfield's unit in the Ohio National Guard, went to "war" today along with 10,000 other troops in the state militia.

They rolled into Columbus on trucks this morning to participate in five-day maneuvers that will keep them away from home on Thanksgiving.

Upwards of 3,500 officers and men were concentrated at the state fairgrounds and at the Ohio State university in Columbus where Battery D is stationed. They will launch an offensive against a mythical enemy in northwest Columbus Friday.

Other troop concentration points are at Cincinnati, Georgetown, Xenia, Athens, Camp Perry and St. Mary's.

The officers and men will pause tomorrow however in the midst of their war game preparations to partake of 10,000 pounds of turkey which Adjt. Gen. Gilson D. Light ordered served at all concentration points.

Ordered by the War department as a part of its expanded program, the maneuvers will include offensive action against a mythical enemy and a drill in the fundamentals of army regulations as well as night marches.

Brig. Gen. Frank D. Henderson who in private life is warden of Ohio Penitentiary will be in charge of operations at Columbus where the Mansfield battery is quartered.

The Mansfield unit left at 6:30 a. m. today in command of Capt. Robert J. Nichols, First Lieut. Harry Snyder, and Second Lieuts. Dale Uhlich and Russell Seymour.

Other Mansfield officers who left for the test mobilization were Capt. Coleman Todd and First Lieut. Robert Springer of the battalion staff; Capt. Grover E. Swoyer, chaplain of the regiment, and Lieut. Col. J. Earl Ports, second in command of the quartermasters regiment.

Capt. H. R. Critchfield of Mansfield, who is in charge of the service battery, of Bucyrus, also left with his outfit this morning.

Bundster Blushes Beet-Red as Jury Hears of 'Terrible' Love for Divorcee.

NEW YORK—Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American bund, testified in his grand larceny trial today that he had called Mrs. Florence Camp, blond divorcee, "heaven sent" and asked her "to become my beloved wife" but insisted "it was all in fun."

Resuming the stand for state cross-examination, Kuhn told Assistant District Attorney Herman J. McCarthy that he did not propose to Mrs. Camp when he met her on the S. S. Westernland en route to Germany in February, 1938, because she was "too much of a lady to marry a man she has known for only four or five days."

He then admitted writing the following note, which was admitted to evidence:

"Florence, I am terribly in love with you. I beg you to become my beloved wife. I will always be real true to you and will love you forever . . .

COMPTON'S BID FOR JOB HEARD

Washington Educator Believed 2nd In Line for O. S. U. Post.

COLUMBUS—(AP) — Dr. Wilson M. Compton returned to Washington today while members of the board of trustees of Ohio State university considered his candidacy as a successor to Dr. George W. Rightmire as president of the school.

Three trustees interviewed Dr. Compton here yesterday after the professor of economics of George Washington university conferred at Cincinnati with Board Chairman M. Edith Campbell.

Persons close to the board said that while Dr. Compton was well considered, his bid for the presidency was second to that of Dr. Grover McDonald, Brooklyn educator.

CITY SET FOR OFFENSIVE ON MR. GOBBLER

Larders Filled as Mansfield Prepares for Traditional Thanksgiving Feast.

BUSINESS, INDUSTRY PAUSE

Observance of Holiday to Be Marked by Church Services and Family Dinners.

Ice boxes and kitchen shelves began to pile up today with all of the trappings that surround the traditional Thanksgiving bird, for tomorrow is the day when America sits down at the table, unbuttons its vest, tucks in a napkin and "goes to it."

In spite of the confusion over the dates of the holiday, one thing remains perfectly clear—the Thanksgiving appetite hasn't changed and turkey is still the favorite "centerpiece" for the dinner table.

This year Ohio raised its largest turkey crop—over a million birds—which is 35 per cent more than last year. Most of them will be eaten right here in the Buckeye state, with supplemental supplies from Minnesota and southern states.

And All The Trimmings.

Mansfield started ordering its holiday birds as early as two weeks ago and markets were busy today delivering them, as well as tons—yes sir, literally tons—of celery, cranberries, sweet potatoes and all of the trimmings for a Thanksgiving feast.

Mansfield will observe the holiday by closing down all business and industry. City, county, state and federal offices will be closed so that employes may have the holiday.

The observance of Thanksgiving in Mansfield churches will begin with a service at 7:30 p. m. today at the South Main Evangelical church. Rev. C. L. Kern, pastor, will preach on "The True Cause For Thanksgiving."

Other services will be held tomorrow morning at four churches. The first of these is at 9 a. m. at the First Lutheran church with Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, preaching.

Union services will be held at 10 a. m. at three churches. Six downtown congregations, First Methodist, First United Brethren,

Confession Of Plot on Hitler Sets Off Drive

Systematic Campaign To Wipe Out Nazi Foes Follows Admission By German That He Set Bomb; Berlin Declares Suspect Was 'Tool Of Britain.'

(By International News Service)

BERLIN—A systematic campaign to wipe out every last vestige of internal opposition within the reich was predicted by well-informed Berlin quarters today in the wake of the confession by Georg Elser, 36-year-old German citizen that he set the time bomb which nearly claimed the life of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler in Munich on Nov. 8.

Nazi Germany virtually declared war upon the anti-Nazi "black front" governed from abroad by Otto Strasser, officially described as a "renegade," who was named along with "British agents" as spiritual author of the assassination attempt.

"Further sensations" were promised by Nazi spokesmen who identified Elser—still a mysterious and enigmatic prisoner—as "merely a tool" in the conspiracy aimed at the assassination of Hitler and other leading members of the Nazi regime.

Elser's part in the attempted killing was merely that of a technical assistant, it was said. Considerable stress was laid upon the arrest of two men described as British agents—a "Mr. Best and a Captain Stevens."

Arrested at Border.

These two men were taken into custody when they attempted to cross the Dutch-German border at Venloo, Holland, the morning after the assassination effort. Their arrest followed a searching examination by German agents of what was described as a carefully organized anti-German organization operated by the British intelligence service at the Hague.

These German operatives, it was said, planted "false information" in London which eventually led to arrest of the two alleged conspirators.

Their apprehension, Berlin quarters declared, marked a "catastrophe of the first rank" for the British Intelligence service. Information of inestimable value regarding operations of the British secret service was uncovered in the course of the investigation at the Hague, it was said.

Local interest in Elser's arrest over shadowed all international developments in Berlin, although official quarters expressed keen indignation over Great Britain's announced intention of seizing German exports in retaliation for alleged "indiscriminate" mine-laying, which the Germans have repudiated.

"This is an impudent and carefully prepared pretext for the launching of new British acts of piracy," a spokesman said. "It is designed to strike at neutral nations and compel them to bow to the British blockade under a shield of morality."

Nazi officials insisted that Elser's arrest was merely the first step in their campaign to root out all foreign inspiration and agitation against the government.

Heinrich Himmler, chief of the German gestapo, secret police, charged the plot had been organized by Otto Strasser, former Nazi leader now described as a "renegade," and financed by the British secret service.

(In London the British foreign office issued a statement flatly denying German allegations that a British agency as responsible for perpetrating the Munich bomb plot.)

MINES: Italian Ship Latest To Strike Underwater Explosive

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—German planes today dropped bombs in a raid over the Shetland Islands off the northern coast of Scotland. Air alarms in one of the island towns were followed quickly by the "all clear" signal. Six planes took part in the raid, but failed to score any hits, British sources announced.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The Italian steamer Fianona, 6,660 tons, was reported today to have struck a mine off the southeast coast of England.

The ship was holed badly by the explosion, which occurred last night, it was said, but still was afloat today while tugs tried to pull her into port.

None of the crew of 33 was reported injured. It was not at once clear how many, if any, passengers the Fianona carried.

The Italian ship ran afoul of the accelerating war at sea as Great Britain undertook measures of retaliation for what Prime Minister Chamberlain described as the "ruthless brutality" of German attacks on merchant shipping.

Stirred by other ship sinkings the admiralty moved to intensify the blockade against Germany by seizing all German exports on the high seas.

The blockade hitherto has been directed only against German imports.

The new measure — to which

BLOCKADE: Neutrals Protest British Ban On Nazi Export

(By United Press)

LONDON—Great Britain risked the good will of all neutral countries today by clamping a blockade on German exports in reprisal for Germany's allegedly unrestricted mine warfare.

The blockade will go into effect within 24 hours. British warships then will be empowered to stop and search any neutral ship suspected of carrying anything that came from Germany.

Protests by neutrals already had started.

Dutch newspapers said the new policy only would make matters worse. They said Dutch unemployment would increase and they wanted to know whether "goods of German origin" applied to products made in neutral countries from German raw materials.

Norwegian newspapers said the new sea war would probably increase the toll of neutral ships and lives.

At Helsingfors, Finland, observers wondered how Britain would apply the blockade to the Baltic, where Germany gets vital war materials from the Scandanavias in exchange for German products, and they believed that the British might either send their fleet crashing into the Baltic or urge one of the Baltic neutrals to give Britain submarine bases so they could prey on German shipping as

Before the Feast—The Day's News

AS AN APPETIZER for its Thanksgiving dinner tomorrow, Mansfield will have the last minute news right up to the first course. The holiday edition of The News-Journal will be delivered around noon—just in time for every member of the family to scan the news before the fruit cocktail is served.

Besides the news, the holiday edition will bring announcements of the opening of the Christmas shopping season in its advertising sections. Friday will be the official opening of Mansfield Christmas shopping season and windows and stores will be definite reminders that Christmas is only 26 shopping days away.

The first bright glitter of the holiday season will be seen Friday when the colored street lights are turned on in the downtown section. They will be turned on every night from now on until the holiday season is over, according to V. H. Lodde, secretary of the Retail Merchants association.

Starting Friday store windows will be decorated for Christmas and the completed lines of merchandise will be on display. Store having toylands will open them on that day.

Announcements of these openings will appear in The News-Journal's Thanksgiving issue.

Administration Scores In Tobacco Quota Referendum

GROWERS O. K. U. S. PROGRAM FOR NEW YEAR

Reverse Stand of Year Ago by Approving Control Plan, Seen as Election Issue.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The administration's crop control program—a potential issue in next year's presidential campaign—marked up today its second farmer referendum victory of the fall.

Reversing a stand they took a year ago, growers voted overwhelmingly for strict marketing quotas on their 1940 burley tobacco crop.

Virtually complete returns gave 87,148 votes for quotas and 16,269 against—a favorable majority of 84 per cent. Quotas must be approved by two-thirds of the farmers voting.

In October, growers of flue-cured tobacco approved marketing controls under which the federal government may tell each producer how much he can sell. Those selling in excess of their quotas would be liable to a penalty tax of 10 cents a pound.

Obviously pleased with these returns, federal farm officials predicted victory in a third and more important referendum Dec. 9. The nation's 2,500,000 cotton growers then will be asked to approve, for the third consecutive year, marketing quotas on the south's big cash crop.

Advocates said that with victory in the cotton election, there should be no difficulty in winning endorsement of the Roosevelt farm policies at the Democratic national convention next summer.

The Roosevelt administration was reported to be ready to counter Republican bids for farm belt support with an active campaign in behalf of its agricultural aid program.

Wallace to Take Lead.

Secretary Wallace is expected to take the lead in a speech soon before the Farm Bureau federation at Chicago. There were indications he would disclose at that time the nature of any farm measures which the administration will lay before the 1940 congress.

Wallace reversed the usual procedure yesterday to visit Senator Norris (Ind.-Neb.) at the latter's office for a lengthy conference.

The secretary told reporters afterward that he and Norris had discussed "agriculture and politics," observing that it seemed almost impossible at times to divorce the two.

Asked for comment on the proposal of Senator McNary (R.-Ore.), for enlargement of the present benefit payment program to include all crops, Wallace said with a grin:

"If the Republicans are going to start taking an interest in the farmer, the Democrats will start taking an even greater interest."

Norris told reporters he agreed with McNary that the battleground in the 1940 election was likely to be in the agricultural sections. He said he thought it would be a case of Republican promises being pitted against Democratic accomplishments.

'Baloney,' Dreiser Says of Women's Clubs; Stirs Fuss

LOS ANGELES.—(INS)— Theodore Dreiser, the novelist, wiped his brow today and wondered whether it was worth while to tell ladies what he thought of them in general.

Verbally, Dreiser took pretty much of a licking from 300 members of the Los Angeles Junior League club yesterday after he calmly informed them that:

"Women's clubs are a lot of baloney."

He didn't expect the barrage of queries that came his way.

"Mr. Dreiser," spoke up Mrs. Henry Duque, president of the Junior League, "you wouldn't say the P. T. A. could answer to that description?"

Dreiser feinted:

"The P. T. A. is not a woman's club. It is a very fine organization which is part of our educational system."

Asked what he was doing at present, he said he was writing a book of philosophy.

"Is it about women?" asked a Junior Leaguer coyly.

"Without women," Dreiser replied triumphantly. "There would be no need for philisophy."

In a little while they saw it walking around the yard and put it back in the shed. A little concerned for the chief item on the Thanksgiving menu, they went out later and as they opened the door, the "tame" duck suddenly developed the power and speed of a mallard and flew high over the buildings and when last seen was heading north.

HOPE STATE TO RELEASE FUNDS

Clevelanders Wait Ruling on Use of Tax Money for Dire Relief Needs.

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—With $45,000 in relief money left and the fund being spent at a rate of $5,000 a day, Cleveland welfare officials anxiously awaited a ruling of Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert today which would release surplus collections of utility taxes for relief use.

Meanwhile, the city's 32,000 relief clients had prospects of a good Thanksgiving as welfare officials prepared to distribute $8,000 worth of five-day orders today.

Although Herbert indicated it might take several days before he decides whether the city may use the excise taxes in the state treasury, Mayor Harold H. Burton said he was told by Herbert in a telephone conversation he "might" reach a decision today.

If Herbert decides the taxes may be distributed it would release $360,000 in Cuyahoga county. Cleveland's share would be $300,000. Unless the release is made, all indigents will be without regular allowances by the end of the week, Welfare Director Fred W. Ramsey said.

Fifty persons who were refused relief yesterday threatened to stage a sit-down strike in a relief station, but police reported they went home early last night.

In order to release excise taxes for relief use Herbert would have to reverse a ruling of his predecessor, Herbert S. Duffy, that any surplus collection of such funds must be kept in a sinking fund.

Labor leaders offered their assistance to Mayor Burton when Albert Dalton, business representative of the Cleveland Building Trades council, made an appointment with Burton for a conference this morning at which the leaders will offer to help in the crisis.

QUASHES SUIT

Judge Dismisses Bradley's Action Against Davey.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Common pleas court dismissed today the $500,000 damage suit brought against former Gov. Martin L. Davey and the General Motors Corporation by Lee Bradley, self-styled "political contact" man.

Davey had caused Bradley's arrest on a perjury charge after Bradley's testimony before a 1937-38 senate committee investigating state government.

Judge John R. King cancelled the suit because Bradley failed to post security for costs.

Bradley testified that he arranged large contributions for Davey's 1934 gubernatorial campaign in return for a promise to give General Motors half the state's auto and truck purchase business.

1,000 APPLAUD STUDENT ACTORS AS THEY MAKE DEBUT IN COMEDY

A promising group of young high school actors made their stage debut in Mansfield high school auditorium last night when the January graduates presented their class play, "Vanity," a three-act comedy by Ernest Denny, before an audience of 1,000 persons.

For all but one of the cast of 12 it marked their debut in high school dramatics.

Acting honors went to Warren Bradford, David Walker and Patricia Palmer, who was cast in the lead role of Vanity Fayre, a New York actress.

Miss Palmer, as a petted star who considered herself the center around which her world revolved, captured the spotlight by her portrayal of the part. Walker, as Jefferson Brown, her fiance and Bradford as Lord Cazalet, her English friend, also gave stellar performances.

The lone "veteran" in the play was Vivian Miller, as Lady Holland. Miss Miller played the lead of "Lavender and Old Lace" last year, and was cast in "Icebound," two years ago.

Others in the cast were Margaret Oswalt, Miriam Smith, Maybelle Hunt, Edward Eisele, Virginia Fairman, Janet Baughman, Charles Betz and John Pfahler.

The play, considered one of the best chosen for presentation at the school in some time, was directed by Earl L. Heasley, school dramatics instructor. All new scenery, recently made by members of the stage crew, was used for the first time last night.

Between acts entertainment was furnished by Betty Austin and Robert Earley, vocalists, and the school orchestra directed by S. K. Jorgenson.

Girls of the class who served as ushers were Dorothy Blackstone, June Statler, Mary Jane Probst, Janet Gadfield, Mary Alice Smith, Louise Aungst, Martha Wappner, Elizabeth Wharton, Georgie Alvan and Beverly Pace.

The production staff, in addition to Heasley, included Joan Twitchell and Jean Wolff, business managers, Ruth Smith and Lois Robinson, advertising managers, and Polly Morrissey, prompter.

HAAG ELECTED

City Plumbing Official Heads Ohio Society of Inspectors.

Fred Haag, 376 Marion avenue, city plumbing inspector, was notified today that he had been elected president of the Ohio Society of Plumbing Inspectors.

Haag was named at a meeting of the organization in Canton to succeed E. C. Carlson of Youngstown. Other officers chosen were W. E. Beckley of Canton, vice president, and L. P. Sorensen of Alliance, re-elected secretary-treasurer.

The new president has been a member of the state organization for the past three years since he assumed the job of city plumbing inspector which was created by council.

Haag had been in the plumbing business here for 35 years before his appointment as inspector. During the past year he was vice president of the society.

ASHLAND NATIVE TAKEN BY DEATH

Mrs. Edwards, 68, Succumbs at Home After Short Illness.

ASHLAND — Mrs. Maggie Shearer Edwards, 68, died at her home today after an illness of several weeks. She was born in Ashland, June 24, 1871, and, except for three years spent in California, resided here her entire life.

The only immediate survivor is a sister, Miss Sude Shearer of Ashland. She was a member of the Methodist church and Sunday school, Women's Foreign Missionary society and Bethany Rebekah lodge.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 2:30 p. m. Friday with Rev. A. A. Hunter of the Methodist church officiating. Burial will be in Ashland cemetery.

CONVICT FOUND GUILTY UNDER LINDBERGH LAW

Cries 'Oh, My God!' as Jurors Return Verdict in Murder of Salesman Prisoner.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO — Oliver Lawrence Dressler, alias Jack Russell 38, was found guilty today and sentenced to die under the Lindbergh law by a federal court jury for the kidnaping last July of William Scott Hamilton, Kansas salesman.

Dressler kidnaped Hamilton after escaping from the Oklahoma state penitentiary at McAlester and shot and killed him July 14 near Ringwood, Ill.

As the verdict was announced Dressler threw out his hands in a gesture of despair and cried: "Oh, my God!"

The five men and seven women jurors—the first mixed jury in the history of Cook county (Chicago) qualified to impose the death penalty—received the case at 10:20 p. m. last night after watching Dressler re-enact the slaying with Defense Counsel Daniel Rogers taking the role of Hamilton. They deliberated 8 hours and 31 minutes.

As the jury left the room, Dressler, who was sent to the Oklahoma prison after his wife, Mary, 40, Chicago, had told police where he could be found, turned to a newspaperman and said:

"Be sure and tell Mary 'thank you.'

"God knows I'm not a killer. If I had wanted to kill that fellow I could have done it intentionally long before they said I did."

Defense Maps Appeal.

Defense Counsel Rogers said the verdict would be appealed, contesting the constitutionality of the Lindbergh law.

Dressler was indicated and tried only on the kidnaping charge under the Lindbergh law which makes provision for a death penalty for the crime. A. Bradley Even, assistant U. S. attorney had told the jury that under the law, it was not necessary for the government to prove Hamilton was murdered.

Hamilton, 23, was an Arkansas City, Ark., milling salesman. His body, clad only in underwear, was found on a lonely road near Ringwood. His clothes, money, jewelry and automobile were missing. Dressler was captured in Arkansas four days later by a small-town constable.

CORN LOAN SET

Farmers Can Borrow 57 Cents a Bushel on 1939 Crop.

Farmers in Richland county and other sections of the middle west who participated in the federal crop program this year may obtain government loans of 57 cents per bushel on their surplus corn, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace announced today.

The loan rate is the same as it was in 1938 when only 14 Richland county farmers borrowed on their corn crop. They obtained loans on a total of 4,560 bushels of corn.

Because of the bumper corn crop this year, more county farmers are expected to seek loans this winter, crop officials said. The loans are available only to farmers who complied with the provisions of the federal AAA program.

Corn taken as security for loans will be stored on farms in huge metal cribs, some of which were manufactured in Mansfield by the Martin Steel Products company.

HEARING FIXED

Commissioners to Act on Proposed Madison Ditch Dec. 4.

County commissioners today had set Dec. 4 for a hearing on the proposed construction of an extension to the Burns-Geddes drainage ditch in Madison township northwest of Mansfield.

The hearing will be at 11 a. m. in the commissioner's office at the courthouse. Commissioners will view the site of the proposed improvement on Nov. 27.

FAIR ENOUGH!

U. S. Attorney Finds Way To Take Hand In Putting Crimp In Kansas Machine

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

KANSAS CITY—Maurice Milligan, the federal district attorney, began the official investigation of the fraudulent voting system maintained by the Pendergast gang in December, 1936, which was shortly after the presidential election. The reporters of the Star had turned up thousands of fake registrations, but this material was of no use to Milligan except as information.

*

It was useless as legal evidence because the only law on which Milligan could proceed was one concerning the alteration of ballots, intimidation of voters or denial by other means of the individual's right to vote in a federal election and to have his vote counted as cast.

The registration stuff might have been useful in the local courts, but they were part of the machine, and in a subsequent attempt to convict a Pendergast man of spending $10,000 of public money to improve private property it was discovered that the gang had packed the jury list with officeholders and other politicians.

* * *

So in the early stages the federal courts presented the only hope, and Milligan soon found frauds which were actionable under the federal law. He found that Republican ballots had been altered and added to the overwhelming Democratic totals, and that was a federal offense. His work showed results in February, 1937, and there have been 259 convictions to date. This just about cleans up the job. The registration has dropped about 60,000, the margin of fakery, and the machine is dying of starvation now.

The gang never did have to steal to win an election in Kansas City, and it is sometimes said that the boys and girls—and the ladies were as larcenous as the gentlemen—stole for pure love of the sport, but that is a romantic explanation, not the practical one. The responsibility in the gang went down to the precinct captain, whose political job, his living, depended on his showing on election day.

The machine wanted to keep a big margin in Kansas City to offset any pluralities that rival candidates might amass elsewhere in Missouri, and the precinct captains were under pressure from above to swell this advantage.

* * *

The game really wasn't worth much to them. They got cheap little political sinecures on which to live and the more nimble operators worked up to fairly decent salaries, but they were always paying out money to the organization in assessments, contributing to petty neighborhood collections for the destitute or buying flowers for funerals or weddings.

To keep their positions, they stole names from other precinct rolls, registered dead men and, to avoid embarrassment with the boss, switched Republican votes over into the Democratic column. So it wasn't true sporting love of larceny that motivated them. It was a political and thus an economic necessity, and each Republican vote in his precinct was a grave reflection on the efficiency of a captain. Corresponding obligations goaded them in the primaries.

Still the people of Kansas City gave no evidence of caring. They realized that an organization so tight and efficient, so obliging and kind to the small individual in a hundred ways during the year and so malicious to ingrate voters, could always win in Kansas City and figured that a little overage, or a lot of it, was just a mark of zeal and something to be laughed at, not resented.

* * *

Neither did they mind the wide open gambling and the prostitution, which were immoral, to be sure, but were excused on the ground that with these industries to be worked for revenue the underworld would not rob or murder to excess in the nice parts of town.

* * *

There was a superstition—and probably nothing more—that a code existed whereby the underworld, out of gratitude for these opportunities and loyalty to Mr. Pendergast, from whom these blessings flowed, would police itself and refrain from uncouth conduct.

* * *

The police department, which was crooked from the top down, bolstered this belief with its own statistics, indicating that crime was rare. A crooked police force can do this easily by ditching complaints or, for example, reducing a burglary charge to one of petty larceny.

The people didn't know much about their town, and if they resented anything it was the constant harping on corruption which was giving Kansas City a bad name. Businessmen were especially sensitive to this bad-name thing, but the fact was that business men, too, were beholden for favors or trying to win favors from Pendergast or afraid to approve bad publicity lest Pendergast raise their taxes or harass them otherwise

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The set vice-president in charge of perspiration asked, "Big sweat or little sweat this time?"

"Big sweat," nodded Richard Thorpe, the director. "We're taking it up from the middle of the close-up."

The man with the little bottle of spraying oil stepped up to Bob Montgomery and sprayed, just as if Bob's face weren't doing its own perspiring in the repeated sessions under hot, close lights.

Bob was backed up in a corner—in this scene for "The Earl of Chicago"—and he was in a tight spot. The man he thought was his pal (Edward Arnold) was telling him off, and a moment or two later on the screen, but hours later as the camera turns, Bob was going to get a gun and shoot his way to trial before the English house of lords and subsequently to the gallows . . .

* * *

Once before in his movie career Bob Montgomery has been really enthusiastic about a picture he was in. The other time was during the making of "Night Must Fall," his best picture, the one that won him nomination for academy award. That was the story Montgomery begged and pleaded to make. There have been at least four others, since then, on which he hounded the Metro front office to no avail. "The Earl of Chicago," now in production, is the fifth. It is as "different" from the typical Montgomery light comedy as was "Night Must Fall." Like that picture, it is a psychological portrait, macabre in spots, but with saving touches of comedy which the former film lacked.

No dealer in allegories, Bob seemed unconscious of his dripping face as he remarked, between takes:

"You've got to sweat, in this business, to get anything good."

He was referring to the work put in on "The Earl of Chicago" before and during production. His producer is Victor Saville (of "Mr. Chipps" fame) and his director is Richard Thorpe, who made "Night Must Fall." The author is Brock Williams.

"We all work together, with the greatest confidence and mutual good will," he said. "That kind of cooperation is essential, I believe, to making a good picture — the kind in which neither producer, director, actor nor writer feels the other fellow is trying to take over his particular job. We're all willing to listen to the other fellow's point of view, and that makes for real team-work.

"There's nothing that can insure the success of a picture, but this way we can all have fun trying for it."

* * *

Bob feels that "The Earl of Chicago" is a gamble for him, just as was "Night Must Fall." The first turned out rather happily, financially as well as artistically, doing 60 per cent better in England than any previous Montgomery film and holding its own in America.

"If this one should flop," he said grinning, "I'll go to the doghouse, a residence with which I have become fairly familiar. It might take ten years for me to come out of it, if at all. If you fail in this business, it's for good. But I think it's worth the gamble. It's an interesting story, a sound one, and it's different.

And it's only coincidence that both Bob's pet movies see their heroes safely to the gallows, if you were thinking (as I was) that being hanged is a Montgomery obsession.

"No," he said, "some of my pet stories—that I still hope to do—are comedies. The main thing is that they're good stories. Unless you start with one, you haven't much chance of a good picture."

And truer words were never spoken.

HOLIDAY EXCUSE FOR GAY ENTERTAINING

Smaller Bridge, Social Clubs Have Afternoon and Evening Parties; Thanksgiving Theme Predominates In Decorations.

ANOTHER holiday is just another excuse for entertainment and the use of pretty and unusual decorations in Mansfield. Hostesses to smaller bridge and social clubs are finding time this week to fit afternoon and evening parties into an already busy schedule.

Mrs. Thomas Woodard entertained members of the E-T club last evening at her home on South Main street. Prizes in contests were awarded to Mrs. Clifford Fox, Miss Frieda Boeble, Miss Marguerite Goetz and Mrs. Ethel McClure. Thanksgiving appointments decorated the small tables when luncheon was served. A Christmas gift exchange will be held at the next meeting, Dec. 12, with Miss Mary Beilstein, 75 West First street.

* * *

There were three tables of five hundred in play at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hunter, east of Mansfield, last night when the Shamrock club members met. Prizes were won by Mrs. Nathan Heston and Raymond Darling. Appropriate holiday decorations were used when refreshments were served at midnight. The next meeting will be held Dec. 7 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weber, Oak street road.

* * *

Card games were in play last evening when Mrs. Russell Indorf entertained members of the U-Name-It club at her home on Pennsylvania avenue in Lincoln Heights. Mrs. Robert Barrett, Mrs. Jack Flaharty, Miss Mildred Ohler and Mrs. Aubrey Thrush won the prizes. Luncheon was served at a long table decorated with lighted tapers, autumn fruit and Thanksgiving favors. Miss Ohler has invited the group to her home on Grace street for the meeting of Dec. 5.

* * *

Mrs. Adam Mayer, Virginia avenue, was hostess to members of the Cyane club last night when bridge was in play at two tables. Prizes were won by Miss Marie Ellen Campbell and Miss Doris Bush. Miss Vida Beckley was a guest.

Refreshments were served at a long table decorated with pink and yellow appointments and cut flowers. The next meeting will be a Christmas party Dec. 6 at the home of Mrs. Peter Creamer, jr., West Fifth street.

Illinois Woman Inspects Naomi Shrine Tuesday

Yellow pompons and white roses decorated the tables at which 67 members and guests of the Naomi Shrine were seated last night at the First Methodist church when dinner was served preceding the annual inspection. Corsages were presented to each of the honored guests.

At 7:30 p. m. Veta S. Olsen, Evanston, Ill., supreme worthy high priestess, inspected the chapter and awarded it the grade of excellent. Other honored guests were Ameilia Cook Burke, Perrysburg, supreme worthy guard, and Mildred Johnson, Toledo, deputy supreme worthy high priestess. Guests from Ashland, Marion, Toledo, Massillon and Cincinnati were also present.

No definite plans were made for the December meeting, but the date will be announced soon, Mrs. Isa Boughton, reporter, announced.

Holiday Dinner Set by Sorority

Final arrangements for a progressive dinner party were made last night by members of Alpha Pi Sigma sorority when they met at the Mansfield-Leland hotel with Mrs. C. R. Martin and Miss Marie Massa serving as hostesses. The afair will be held Dec. 27, and will take the form of a holiday celebration.

Hostesses are Mrs. Donald D. Hattman, Rhein avenue; Mrs. Martin, South Diamond street; Miss Marie Kalbfleisch, West Fourth street, and Mrs. Charles Wilkinson, 47 Sherman avenue.

After the business meeting the members played bridge, and prizes were presented to Mrs. John Sprosty and Mrs. Donald Schneider. The next meeting will be held Dec. 6 at the hotel with Mrs. John Shiplet and Miss Ann Menrath serving as hostesses.

Auxiliary Dresses Dolls for Christmas

Members of the Auxiliary to the Charles Dick camp, Spanish War Veterans dressed Christmas dolls last evening during a meeting at Memorial hall. These dolls will be sent to the Xenia Children's home. Mrs. Mary Johnson was in charge of the business session.

Quilting was done by the Sewing circle during the afternoon and at 6 o'clock Mrs. Andrew Heidinger and Mrs. Thomas Bell served dinner. There will be an all-day quilting session at the hall on Nov. 30, and the next regular meeting will be held on Dec. 5.

Miss Wilford to Wed William Wert on Dec. 9

The approaching marriage of Miss Jane Wilford and William Wert was disclosed today following a party given by Miss Mildred Shively, 88 Stewart avenue. Miss Wilford, who makes her home at 72 Arlington avenue with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilford, and Mr. Wert will be married Dec. 9 at the Arlington avenue residence. Rev. Guy Volpitto, pastor of the Loudonville Presbyterian church, and a friend of the couple, will officiate.

Prizes at the evening party were received by Miss Dorothy Cunningham, Mrs. Clyde Talley and Mrs. Vernon Davis. Pastel decorations and four lighted tapers were used to decorate the buffet table from which refreshments were served to the guests.

* * *

GIVES PAPER.

Mrs. Frank N. Bennett presented a paper on "The Georgia Islands" during a meeting of the Fortnight club last evening at the home of Mrs. Joseph Michael on Sturges avenue. The meeting of Dec. 12 will be held at the home of Miss Katherine Courtney on Marion avenue.

* * *

HAVE DINNER.

Dinner was served at 6 oclock Monday evening to members of the A. B. C. club at the Towne House. Following the four-course dinner the members attended the theater. The next meeting will be held on Dec. 4 at the home of Mrs. Anthony Lump, 319 South Main street.

MODEST SEQUINS

Sequins are hiding their light in a modest way. A black afternoon frock has the bodice front overlaid with sequins veiled with black georgette. Each sequin is wrapped in a little georgette cover. Multicolor paillettes in an evening blouse, shine through an overblouse of pleated tulle, another veiling notion from the same source.

The young woman above is Mrs. John E. Hall, who was Miss Katherine Piper before her marriage in Cattlesburg, Ky., on Nov. 2. She and her husband took a short wedding trip following the ceremony and are now at home to friends at 492 Cline avenue.

Mrs. Esther Braden Elected New President of Class

MRS. ESTHER BRADEN was elected president of the Star of Hope class of the South Main Street Evangelical church last evening during a meeting attended by 33 members and one guest, Rev. C. L. Kern, in the church parlors.

Mrs. Eldora Watson will assist Mrs. Braden as vice president. Mrs. Bertha Touby has been named secretary, with Mrs. Sarah Smith and Mrs. Virginia Schmunck as her assistants. Miss Jessie Eckert is the new treasurer, and other new officers are: Miss Mabel Eckert, pianist; Mrs. Candace Smith, assistant pianist; Mrs. F. O. Haldeman, teacher, and Mrs. Estella Solomon, assistant teacher.

During the business session, the class voted to contribute a sum of money to the church budget. Rev. Kern led th devotions. The program was given over to a talk on Hawaii by Miss Ruth Maffett. Mrs. Rhea Duckworth, Mrs. Lucille Homerick, Miss Roma Martin, Mrs. Maude Hershey and Mrs. Clara Speck.

The class will have a Christmas party and exchange at the next meeting, Dec. 19. Mrs. Watson, 818 Park avenue west, will entertain at that time, assisted by Mrs. Solomon, Mrs. Irene Bittenger, Mrs. Lina Armstrong, and Mrs. Helen Gutchall.

STATE OFFICERS HERE.

Three state officers from Cleveland were present for a meeting of the United Review No. 77, W. B. A., last evening at the K. of P. hall. They were Mrs. Phoebe Jones, state field director; Mrs. Ella Sawyer, managing deputy; and Mrs. Eva Knewsome, state captain. A social meeting followed the business, which was conducted by Mrs. Mary Somers. The next meeting will be held at the hall on Dec. 5.

* * *

PLAN PARTY.

Mrs. Glen Macy reviewed "The Candlestick Maker" last evening during a meeting of the Notre Dame Study club at the home of Mrs. Paul Hensler on Vennum avenue. Mrs. Clem Wehinger was in charge of the business, and after the program the hostess served refreshments. Mrs. Hensler is in charge of arrangements for a Christmas party to be held on Dec. 5.

22 Members Attend Amoma Class Meeting

There were 22 members of the Amoma class of St. Matthew's Lutheran church present at the home of Mrs. James Orr, Penn avenue, yesterday. Mrs. Charles Woods and Mrs. Paul Smith were the associate hostesses. Devotions were led by Mrs. Robert Flood, and Mrs. Gail Yontz was in charge of the meeting.

Arrangements were made for a Christmas party and gift exchange to be held Dec. 12. Contest winners last night were Mrs. Stephen Konves and Mrs. Yontz.

Plan Dedication Program For New Simpson Building

Plans were made for the John Simpson Junior high school P.T.A. to participate in the dedication of the new junior high school building on Jan. 16. H. J. Dotson, principal of the school, is general chairman. The arrangements were made last night at a meeting held in the general office on Bowman street.

During the business meeting Mrs. Robert Lamb, membership chairman, reported a total of 203 members in the association.

"Know Your Public Schools" was the topic for a panel discussion conducted by W. L. Miller, superintendent of schools, H. W. Arlin, member of the board of education, Mr. Dotson, Miss Edith Ross, teacher, and Mrs. M. W. Hieber, parent. Each gave a short talk explaining his or her work in relationship to the schools.

The next regular meeting will be the dedication ceremony at which time the officers of the association will serve as hostesses.

Annual Holiday Dinner Planned by C. L. of C.

Plans for the combined business and social meeting of the C. L. of C. were made last night when a routine business meeting was held in the Bird building club rooms. Mrs. James Kuneman was obligated at this time.

The December meeting will be held on the 14th at the club rooms, and will be a dinner and election of officers. A Christmas exchange will follow. Present officers will be the hostesses. This meeting will be the only session in the month, Mrs. R. C. Straub announced today.

TO MEET FRIDAY.

Members of Class 27 of the First Christian church will meet Friday at 2 p. m. with Mrs. Charles Rhoads, 42½ Willow street.

LUNCHEON SERVED TO GARDEN GROUP

Mrs. Charles Chew Hostess for November Function; Evening Holiday Party Scheduled at Mrs. Lanehart's.

THERE were 12 members of the Linnaeus Garden club present for a 1 o'clock luncheon at the home of Mrs. Charles Chew on Highland avenue yesterday afternoon. The table was decorated in keeping with the Thanksgiving theme, and the guests' places were marked with individual corsages. Mrs. Fred Dippman was the associate hostess.

Other, smaller tables, were arranged appropriately for the coming holiday. Mrs. Ray Hammer and Mrs. Cliff D. Sherrard planned one with fruit, while Mrs. Harry Armstrong and Mrs. William Fisher used the idea of the first Thanksgiving as their theme.

Mrs. Dippman had the paper of the afternoon, telling the "Story of Spices." The flower studied was the Ageratum, and this discussion was in charge of Mrs. S. E. Taylor.

The group will have a Christmas party on the evening of Dec. 13 at the home of Mrs. Harvey Lanehart, 202 Bennett street. Mrs. Taylor will assist Mrs. Lanehart with this affair, when there will be a plant exchange.

Rev. Corwin Talks At Chapter Meet

Rev. E. G. Corwin was the guest speaker at a meeting of Frances Willard chapter, W. C. T. U. yesterday at the home of Mrs. E. E. Poole on Arlington avenue. Rev. Corwin's subject was "Peace." Mrs. George Hoover lead the devotions, and Mrs. Jacob Sheriff conducted the business session in the absence of the president, Mrs. F. O. Haldeman. Mrs. Elizabeth Hulit gave a report on the National W. C. T. U. convention, held in Rochester, N. Y. recently.

The group sewed and made comforts during the all-day meeting. A covered-dish luncheon was served at noon. Mrs. E. L. Minard will have the meeting of Dec. 19 at her home on Lexington avenue.

'Greatest Flower Show Ever,' Garden Club Members State

Stuhldreher's Floral Company's Flower Show Given Enthusiastic Reception—Open Until 9:30 Tonight.

"The finest flower show Mansfield has ever had"—that was the verdict of Mrs. Gerald Moore and Mrs. Charles Nail, and other members of the Mansfield Garden Club, after they had viisted the Stuhldreher Floral Company's Fall opening and "Mum" show at 46-48 West Fourth Street.

Concurring in this judgment were hundreds of Mansfield flower lovers who visited Stuhldreher's show Monday and Tuesday—and many of the early visitors were planning to attend again this afternoon and evening, as the show will continue until 9:30 p. m.

And those who have not selected their Thanksgiving table decorations will be able to get personal help from Mrs. Payne, Mr. Eller, and Mr. Berno on proper selection and arrangement of flowers for the table, specially priced at $1.00 and $1.21.

Orders for flowers to be delivered out of town Thanksgiving Day will be received until 9:30 tonight, and delivery will be assured, it was announced. The Floral Company's show is open to the public and the store will remain open until noon Thursday. —adv.

Shopping Around...

With MARIANNE

DON'T let Dec. 24th arrive to find you in a quandary over Christmas gifts. . . . Christmas eve will creep up on you before you know it, and suddenly you'll realize that you forgot Aunt Suzy in California . . . remember you didn't send a handkerchief to Cousin Hattie . . . and discover that the sweater you promised your niece wasn't bought in the rush. . . . Really though, none of this need happen, because the downtown stores are featuring so many attractive things these days that it ought to be downright easy to do your Christmas shopping up early.

The very newest thing this week is Jabot perfume—which comes in a beautiful bottle that looks just like a crystal jabot—that's the expensive package. . . . The more reasonable bottle is fastened on the back of a smart-looking gold clip. . . . And the "Scarlet Fifi"—that's not only new, but entirely different too. It's a lace boot with a bright red heel and tiny pearl buttons topped by a bright red satin bow, which has six red satin Jabot sachets attached and a little flacon of the same perfume in the toe of the boot.

* * *

Ever since he introduced his famous "Tweed" perfume some several Christmases ago, a leading French perfumer has found his line of toiletries to be best-sellers. . . . Meantime he has brought out many more famous scents, such as "Miracle." "Shanghai," "Anticipation" and "A Bientot"—and you should see how they're dressed up for Christmas this year. . . . About the cutest gift package of all is called, "Christmas Party"—a glistening gold tree decorated with a bright red star, ribbon and feathers conceals petit flacons of any three of the perfume fragrances. . . . Three Silent Messengers in a gay box are really three bottles of your favorite cologne. . . . And cute little satin sachet bags come in as many shades as they do scents.

* * *

A GIFT that's sure to delight any girl any day is an attractive compact. . . . And the stores have lots of them. . . . The newest ones are those with the magic catch—that is, the powder compartment springs open when the mirror is tipped back, so that broken fingernails are no longer a result of prying open the powder till. . . . These vanities are made by a nationally famous manufacturer and can be purchased in attractive gold, silver and enamel topped styles. . . . And just the thing for a best beau to give his best girl is a romantic little heart-shaped compact of gold or black which contains powder, rouge and lipstick.

* * *

Another important gift item is lingerie, and the display this year seems prettier than ever. . . . Satin gowns in pastel shades of blue, peach and pink are printed with dainty floral designs. . . . Other satin gowns of rose and aqua are trimmed with fluffy chiffon. . . . Dressy pajamas in light colors are decorated with rows of lace. . . . And cozy brushed wool bed jackets in the new November colors, turquoise and coral, are smart with peter pan collars of lace.

* * *

PROBABLY the nicest gifts to buy men for Christmas are those which most folks hesitate longest before buying—you guessed it—ties and other extra accessories. Perhaps if you keep this in mind, then selecting the right ensemble won't prove so difficult after all. . . . If you're purchasing a tie and handkerchief, match the handkerchief to the background color of the tie. . . . And if you're getting an ensemble of four, match the shirt and handkerchief—the tie and hose, having all four blend together—in other words, match the cottons . . . match the silks. . . . As for neckwear—leatherback satin ties make any suit look like a million dollars—they come in figured or plain designs in shades of wine, brown, garnet, green, blue and plum. . . . Imported royalty silks in tapestry patterns are also smart—as are the new jewel patterns of small designs in tones taken from jewels. . . . Stripes are always favored, and this season is no exception with silks and wools in all colors and off-tones.

* * *

Handkerchief are clever this year—cottons are the thing, and they look for all the world like silk. . . . They are checked and striped with plain colored tips in any variety of shades you might desire.

* * *

THERE are kits—and then there are kits, and the one I'm about to describe is really the very last word. . . . It's a cowhide travel case fitted with after shave lotion, shaving creme, after shave powder, military brush, nail file, comb, scissors, toothbrush and razor containers—it's lined with rubberized silk and has a zipper closing.

GREAT NEWS FOR MANSFIELD PEOPLE

Amazing Reports of Relief With Williams Formula Create Sensation Here.

Men and women from far and near are flocking daily to their druggist to get Williams Formula, the famous medicine which is attracting widespread attention.

People suffering from acid indigestion, stomach gas, sick-headaches, nervousness, dizziness, "half alive" feeling because of excess acidity and lazy elimination declore they can hardly believe the remarkable relief they have experienced from taking Williams Formula.

Floods of letters have been pouring in from grateful users, praising this remarkable medicine. Typical of these letters is the statement of Mrs. Bertha Speckman, 1215 Morris Rd., Mt. Morris, Mich., who says:

"I have experienced considerable sour gas pains and constipation. Many foods I would eat would sour and form a great deal of gas and I would bloat. I have also been troubled with lazy bowels. Some time ago, I decided to try Williams Formula and I can surely say that I can eat many foods now and Williams Formula has a definite action on my bowels. I am grateful to have had opportunity of ordering such a fine medicine as Williams Formula."

MRS. BERTHA SPECKMAN

Why should you suffer spells of dizziness, sick headaches, nausea, poor appetite, gas, blots, tired, run-down, "half-alive" feeling, due to acid stomach and lazy elimination? Williams Formula may be just the thing you need to bring you relief and a new zest for living. Williams Formula is a compound of Natural Herbs and Minerals which start right to work giving relief, just like taking several good medicines in one. It is sold in two sizes—$1.50, $6. Costs only a few cents a day to take and may be worth $10 a bottle to you in the relief it gives. Surely you owe it to yourself to give it a fair trial. Get a bottle of Williams Formula today at Hursh's Drug Store, 4th and Diamond.—Adv.

Take Care In Picking Bird

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

THANKSGIVING is the time to serve turkey, so when we go gunning for the gobbler we should know that the feet of a young turkey are black, those of an old bird grayish. Do not allow the dealer to cut off feet until leg tendons have been drawn. A young turkey, like a young chicken, should have a smooth, soft skin, minus bruises or blotches. The breastbone test is often made to determine whether a bird is young; the end of the bone farthest from the head is often quite pliable in a young bird and can be moved from side to side. A 10-pound turkey will serve six to eight generously.

Ducks and geese are also popular holiday foods. As these birds age their windpipes become hard, and their necks longer and lanker. The windpipes of young birds should yield when pressed with the fingers.

To dress and clean poultry, first remove hairs and down by singeing. To do this, expose all parts of bird to the flame. Cut off head; draw out pin feathers. To pull off the foot, and with it the tendons, cut through skin around leg one and one-half inches below the leg joint, taking care not to cut the tendons Place leg at this cut over edge of board. Press downward and snap the bone. Then take foot in right hand, holding firmly with left hand, and pull off foot

Make an incision in the skin below the breastbone. Remove through this cut the entrails, gizzard, heart and liver. Cut gall bladder carefully from under right lobe of liver, taking care that it is not broken. Remove every part of lungs, located on either side of backbone and enclosed by the ribs. Remove kidneys from hollow near end of the backbone. Cut oil bag from tail.

Placing the first two fingers under the skin close to the neck, withdraw the windpipe, also the crop, which will be found adhering to the skin close to the breast. Draw back the skin of neck, cut off neck near the body, leaving the skin long enough to fasten under the back. Wash bird thoroughly by allowing cold water to run through it. Wipe inside and outside, and see that everything has been drawn.

To truss chicken and turkey, draw thighs close to body and insert a steel skewer through middle joint, running it through the body and out under the middle joint or other side. Cross drumsticks, tie firmly with a long cord and fasten to tail. Place wings close to body and insert a second skewer through wings and body. Draw neck under back and fasten with a small wooden skewer. Turn bird on its breast. Cross string attached to tail and wind it around each end of lower skewer: again cross string and draw around each end of upper skewer. Tie string in knot and cut off the ends. This latter is done after poultry has been washed, singed and drawn, and then stuffed with desired stuffing.

Perfume Romantic As Moonlight

By MME. QUI VIVE

Perfumes are as romantic as music and moonlight on the canals of Venice. They excite the imagination, they bring back haunting memories. They remind you of old-fashioned gardens, gorgeous parties, lovely apparel. If a young woman goes money-flinging and comes back with an armful of aromatic treasures nobody should give her a dressing down. She is following the impulse of her heart, doing what every woman would like to do. We buy them when we should be paying the grocery bill. It is our fatal weakness, and should be forgiven.

A perfume expresses a woman's taste and her character. If she is blessed with a fastidious nose, which is a greater blessing than most of us realize, she will select an exquisite floretted odor that will be as dainty as herself. She will use it discreetly, knowing that, as she has become accustomed to her favorite scent, it will seem less apparent to her than to those with whom she comes in contact.

She won't tip up the bottle on frock or coat, but will apply its contents to her arms and neck with an atomizer, which saves a lot of money in the long run. Never, never will she put it on her hair. Even the cleanest scalp is filmed with sebacous oil; and one that hasn't been tubbed for a week will carry chemical deposits left there by the sweat glands. And these fluids take the heart out of the finest perfume ever compounded by a cosmetic chemist.

* * *

With fashions as quaint as silk mitts and phaetons we're edging away from the overpowering, sophisticated scents that held sway for so long a time. They were mostly synthetic blends and they did last. Women buyers fancied that by using a tiny bit there would be a lessening of this knock-you-in-the-nose influence. But that idea won't work. Your perfume must be right at the start. You must get excited at the first sniff of it. You'll know that it will have the same effect upon other people. You'll come near, they'll take a deep breath, look raptly pleased. That's the way it works.

If you're going in for a chignon, bustles and bodices with darts, you can revert to honeysuckle, sweet pea, lilac or jasmine, all good old-timers that your mother used to use. They're just as grand as they ever were. If you're a lover of outdoor sports you will find compelling woodsy products that will suit you absolutely.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"You're a meanie to unmask me," I pouted. "I was sure you wouldn't know me."

"Nor would I," he returned, "if you hadn't been traveling with old Lil here. But see either of you—look for the other. That's been my motto and Harry's for lo! these many years, and I follow it unconsciously. That's a marvelous get-up, old dear. But aren't you a bit on the heavy side?"

"About 30 pounds," Lillian struck in. "It will come off with the gown, so don't worry. But aren't you going to introduce me to your friends?"

"Presently," Dicky said. "I suppose the magnificent old bird with you was old Harry. What a man! And—may I ask?—why the disguises?"

"To see that nobody put anything over on you, darling. Ah! here comes Harry and his friend. Now we can sit down and talk things over."

The woman half rose from her seat.

"You won't need me or my friend for this little reunion," she sneered. "so if you don't mind—"

"Oh! but we do mind," Lillian said with an eye on her husband, advancing to our table with the other man." We couldn't think of your leaving us so soon."

She waited until her big husband and the other man with him, also of magnificent physique, had reached the table, and made an effective barrier against anyone leaving it. Then she leaned over the table, shielded by the three standing men, and spoke in low, crisp tones to the woman glaring up at her.

"The game's up, sister," she said, "and the pay-off's ready. If you and your friend will come out of the restaurant quietly with us, there won't be any scene, and nobody will dream you aren't leaving voluntarily. And you won't be hurt—if you come quietly."

"You don't dare!" the woman gasped. "You haven't any right—"

"Let 'em have an eyeful, Harry," was Lillian's only answer, and the big man unobtrusively pulled aside his coat, revealing the unmistakable badge of the secret service.

"Government operatives, baby," Lillian said cheerfully. "Now, will you come along, or will we have to carry you?"

The two conspirators looked at each other, and I knew they were thinking of their accomplices outside. Finally, the woman spoke.

"We know when we're up against it," she said. "We'll go. But are you sure you're doing the wise thing? If we haven't anything on you, we sure have on your girl friend here, who started all this mess. I don't believe she or you nor yet the lady wife, will relish that publicity we can—"

"You can do nothing," Lillian said with a finality that had a sinister sound. "Can't you realize yet that everything's washed up for you and your little pals? All we can promise you is that, if you behave yourselves and don't stage any rows, you won't be roughhoused. Otherwise, it will be just too bad for you. Come on now! Both of you get up on your hind legs. Harry will you escort the lady while your pal takes care of her boy friend? The rest of us will follow you out as soon as Dicky has settled all the checks. We'll pay off later, Dicky-bird."

"Dicky, you're to get into that car, too," Lillian said in a tone that admitted no argument. "There are men at either end of the street waiting to get you. But they have no orders about the rest of us. Now don't get het up! Madge, Edith and I are getting into the Underwood limousine with Harry, and a couple of men of father's."

"All right," he said reluctantly. "But if you let anything happen to Madge—!"

He left the sentenece unfinished as he climbed into the armored car, whose chauffeur, at a nod from Harry, locked it and started off. I was careful to keep my eyes averted from Edith Fairfax's face, for I did not wish to see the jealous suffering which I knew was mirrored there at Dicky's solicitude for me

THEATERS

WHAT makes the wheels go 'round in the nation's capital is the theme of "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington," and it has been done so authentically that senate members and Washington officials are said to be very, very angry about it. So angry, 'tis said, that the whole thing may react very badly on the film industry and especially on the investigation of the industry for violation of the Sherman anti-trust act. Anyway, the constituents, the people who mark the ballots, get a close-up of what happens to their senators and representatives when they go to the capitol. One of the dramatic highlights is a filibuster staged by Senator James Stewart who talks for 24 hours without stopping. The picture is getting raves everywhere—only those of the Washington clique are different from those of the movie goers.

* * *

Psychological Drama.

"Full Confession" is a psychological drama in which a priest wages a mental battle with a murderer, trying to get the latter to confess and save the innocent man who is accused of it. Joseph Calleia is seen as the priest who knows the secret, and Victor McLaglen plays the man whose conscience is tortured with a guilty knowledge. Sally Eilers is the girl. But there is comedy too, for the Madison bill of Thursday and Friday. There is a Joe E. Brown comedy, "Beware Spooks!" with Mary Carlisle as his leading woman.

From Federal Theater.

Brenda Marshal, who recently graduated from Federal Theater projects into the movies, plays her first important role in "Espionage Agent," with Joel McCrea, Jeffrey Lynn and George Bancroft. The film depicts the adventures of America's foreign agents who guard our far-flung frontiers against intrigue, plot and sabotage. The time is now, during the "dangerous period" abroad. McCrea is a career man in the diplomatic service whose promising future is cut short by marrying the wrong girl.

"Naughty But Nice."

Ann Sheridan and Gale Page are the two lovelies who support Dick Powell in "Naughty But Nice," which will be shown at the Ritz today and tomorrow. A boy from the sticks writes what he hopes is a symphony, takes it to New York City to sell it, and when it is played for the first time, it turns out to be jitter tune. Allen Jenkins, Jerry Colona, Zasu Pitts, and Maxie Rosenbloom are in the cast. The second feature is "Charlie Chan in Reno" with Sidney Toler.

Filmed at Scapa Flow.

A timely subject is developed in "Torpedoed," English film which is scheduled for the Majestic the last three days of the week, starting tomorow. To add to the interest, the film's locale is Scapa Flow where German submarines recently torpedoed an English war vessel. H. B. Warner, Noah Beery, Richard Cromwell and Hazel Terry are American players in the cast. George O'Brien in "The Fighting Gringo," is also on the Majestic bill.

Boyer at Park.

Charles Boyer, who is wearing the French uniform right now, and Jean Arthur who is currently featured in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" are co-starred in "History Is Made At Night," which heads the Park bill for the last half of the week. It is supplemented by "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew." Edith Fellows is the oldest of the Five Little Peppers and Dorothy Peterson plays their widowed mother.

What's Cause of Divorce?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

For some time I've been saving clippings on unusual pleas for divorce. Whether they have been granted or not, I've been unable to follow the petitions to their judicial decisions.

However, Judge John V. Phelan is expected to have little trouble in deciding the case of a Gloucester, Mass., woman who said her husband blacked her eyes with the Bible. In the not-far-distant township of Beverly, a woman complained that her husband jammed a knife into a wall near her. Still another Gloucester woman charged that her husband hit her until she was unconscious because she wanted steak for dinner when he demanded frankfurters.

Newark, N. J. tops the list for an extraordinary plea for divorce. It is the case of a husband who sat silently for hours bombarding his wife with "thought waves." The wife, who had reason to fear what these wild waves were saying, demands a divorce and has applied for one in the Chancery court of Newark.

The husband makes $350 a month as a statistician employed in New York. She said he had long been absorbed in the study of the supernatural and would sit and stare at her for hours. The thought waves would then mount into a domestic tornado and he would arise, beat and kick her. The husband was directed to pay his wife $100 a month, pending trial of her suit.

The palm for early divorcing goes to a young man, formerly of Washington, D. C. Twice married and twice divorced before he was 21, as a minor he was obliged to institute these suits through his mother.

It's a question whether people like the foregoing should ever have married at all.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKE THEM EARN IT

Many good duplicate players have an almost unalterable rule never to let their opponents play a contract of one in a suit or No Trump. Of course, if this is overdone, and your opponents get wise to it, so that they can depend on you to reopen the bidding with hands that are too weak, they can profit by luring you into some nice penalties, especially when you are vulnerable. But as a generality it is sound tactics to give them a push at least to the level of two, taking something of a chance on finding enough strength in your partners hand if they leave you in or double you.

Dealer: South. North - South vulnerable.)

This deal got played at three different contracts in a match-point duplicate game. At all tables West was the opening bidder with 1-Spade. In some cases this was passed out, and the contract was made right on the head, with the loss of one trick in spades, one in hearts, three in diamonds and one in clubs.

There are plenty of good players who would keep the bidding open with 1-No Trump on East's hand, but none of them did it in this game. Several of the Souths reopened the bidding, however, and profited by it. They doubled when the 1-Spade reached them. It was almost amazing that none of the Norths answered with either 1-No Trump or 2-Hearts. They all bid 2-Clubs.

Several of the 2-Club bids were passed, the contracts being made with the loss of two tricks in spades, one in hearts and two in clubs. In two cases West overcalled the 2-Clubs with a rebid at 2-Spades, which got passed. In each case this was set one. So all of the Souths who doubled earned plus scores for their pairs, either through making their own side's contract or through getting the enemy just too high.

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

If West doubles and then leads the heart 10, how should South play for 5-Diamonds?

CHAMELEON SILHOUETTE

Two-way evening skirts are featured by several Paris designers. They are cut full and circular, but narrow ties of self material hobble them in back, and quite as easily untie to let them loose again. Thus the silhouette may be changed in something less than a jiffy.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, November 23.

A lively day, on which the personal, domestic, social or affectional obligations are paramount over more sordid and ambitious engagements, is forecast. There may be much stirring-about and excitement in connection with the happy routines, but there is a possibility of some deceits, treachery or some other malicious manifestation, possibly in relation to employers or elders. Shun rash, impulsive or extravagant indulgences.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which the personal pleasures of living seem to overshadow the workaday. Much social, domestic, affectional or artistic liveliness is indicated, despite some duplicity, malevolence or crafty opposition. With proper restraint, much happiness and success are possible.

A child born on this day may be talented in unusual ways, perhaps in art, music, drama or in the social graces. It may have elements in its nature to invite malicious or deep-seated opposition that will be hazardous to its success.

Big Ten Comes Out Second Best.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Western conference football teams came off second best in this season's competition with teams outside the circuit. Big Ten teams won 11 of 26 games, losing 12 and tying three. Only Michigan escaped a defeat at the hands of outside elevens.

Injury May Keep Hershey on Bench Thursday

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.

YESTERDAY was an eventful day so far as the sports public was concerned.

News of the decision of the board of education to install lights for night football at Stadium field next fall brought a favorable response from the football-goers, particularly those who have had few opportunities to see the Tygers in action because of work interference.

Announcement of the purchase of the controlling interest in the Mansfield baseball club by a home town syndicate, headed by Joe C. Hartline, was pleasing news to diamond addicts, as it definitely assures the city representation in the Ohio State league again next season.

The only sad note in yesterday's columns was the story revealing the serious burns suffered by Larry Scott, the Braves' groundkeeper, in a Toledo factory last week.

Iowa's Kinnick Is 'Back of Year.'

THE back of the year is Nile Kinnick, all-round star of the Iowa football team which will battle Northwestern in Evanston's Dyche stadium.

Here are a few highlights on the performance of this 21-year-old marvel through seven games, six with major opponents; played 60 full minutes of Iowa's last six contests; completed 28 passes, 11 for touchdowns; has rushed the ball 360 yards; has scored five touchdowns in 17 attempts; his scoring total is 41 points, which when added to the 66 points scored on his passes, gave Iowa 107 of the 123 the Hawkeyes have scored this season.

* * *

Chicago may be the butt of many jokes, but uncanny Robert Zuppke isn't taking them lightly . . . "You know those Maroons might be tough," he tells his boys as they prepare for the game on the midway Saturday. . . Zuppke says this year's Ohio State team is the best he has ever seen at that school. . . It is his opinion Francis Schmidt's eleven could give Southern California a whale of a battle . . . but the veteran Illinois coach says for all their class the Bucks had better not take the Michigan game lightly . . . It the Bucks win the game, giving them undisputed possession of the conference title, it will be their first such honor in 19 years.

Joe Louis said he was Dempsey.

Gene Tunney selected Bob Fitzsimmons.

The choice of Benny Leonard was Harry Greb.

But Tony Galento said characteristically—Tony Galento. "I am the best heavyweight fighter ever to put on the gloves," said the Beer Barrel Poker, "and I will prove that when I meet Joe Louis again."

It's OK With Hawkeyes If Wolves Beat Bucks.

IOWA CITY, Ia. —(U.P.)— Although the University of Michigan football team is the only one which defeated Iowa this season, Iowa students wished the Wolverines success in their game against Ohio State.

An open letter in the Daily Iowan, student newspaper, said: "We can think of no one we would rather see win Saturday, outside of the Hawkeyes, than Michigan, the team that we know would be happy to do us a favor."

The reason:—If Michigan wins and Iowa defeats Northwestern Saturday, Iowa and Ohio State will be tied for the Big Ten championship.

Confident Of Beating Michigan

Bucks Drill Tomorrow for Last Time Before Big Game With Wolverines.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Beset by unfavorable weather, Ohio State university's Western conference football team today staged its next to last workout before departing for Ann Arbor and Saturday's crucial tilt with Michigan.

Tomorrow morning, Thanksgiving day, the Bucks will practice for a couple of hours. Early Friday morning, they will entrain for the Michigan city on a trek which they hope will land them undisputed possession of the Big Ten title for the first time since 1920.

* * *

Coach Francis Schmidt's lads were confident they could stop the Michigan outfit providing they could bottle up the renowned Tom Harmon who has cut quite a swath through enemy defenses for the past two years.

* * *

Time and again this season, the Scarlet and Gray linemen have proven themselves competent to smother individual stars and they figured there was no reason why Harmon could not be throttled.

The Buck offense suffered a severe blow when it was announced that Fullback Jim Langhurst would be out of Saturday's fray because of an injured left leg. However, John Hallabrin, Mansfield sophomore, who has stepped into the breach, should prove a worthy substitute.

At least 15,000 Ohio fans will accompany the team to Ann Arbor.

Bucks Picked By INS

Scott, Sarkkinen Named to Big Ten Team; Daniell, Andraka on Second Club.

By CHESTER YOULL

CHICAGO—(INS)—This is the season of the year when, with the gridiron campaign sliding swiftly into history, football critics take to their pencils and paper and go about the hopeless task of picking the outstanding players of the last two months. So today International News Service presents its first and second All-Big Ten teams.

A first team was put together that includes two men each from Ohio State, Michigan, Minnesota and Iowa and one each from Illinois, Northwestern and Purdue.

* * *

The second eleven is made up of two men each from Michigan, Ohio State and Iowa and one apiece from Purdue, Indiana, Wisconsin, Northwestern and Minnesota.

* * *

The backfield of the first eleven would present a horrible spectacle for any possible foe. Constituted as it is by fonr men who can do almost anything with a football. This quarter consists of Don Scott of Ohio State; Nile Kinnick of Iowa, Harold Van Every of Minnesota and Tom Harmon of Michigan.

And what a terrific assaulting force is wrapped up in this backfield! Any one of the four can run, pass or kick. They all are good blockers, too. Scott is perhaps the most underrated man in the conference. A rugged 215-pounder, he has sparked Ohio State to virtually every win it has turned in this year. He can pass with the best of them and is a devastating runner.

The first string line forms a combination no sane back would want to face. On the ends, Sarkkinen of Ohio State and Rankin of Purdue can both cut down plays and catch passes. That is about all that should be asked of any wings.

* * *

Pedersen of Minnesota and Enich of Iowa are big, tough, hard-driving tackles. Brewer of Illinois and Fritz of Michigan are guards who would satisfy any coach.

* * *

At center, John Haman, Northwestern's 218-pound pivot, gets the ball over Mike Andrako of Ohio State, but only a hair separates the two in all-around ability.

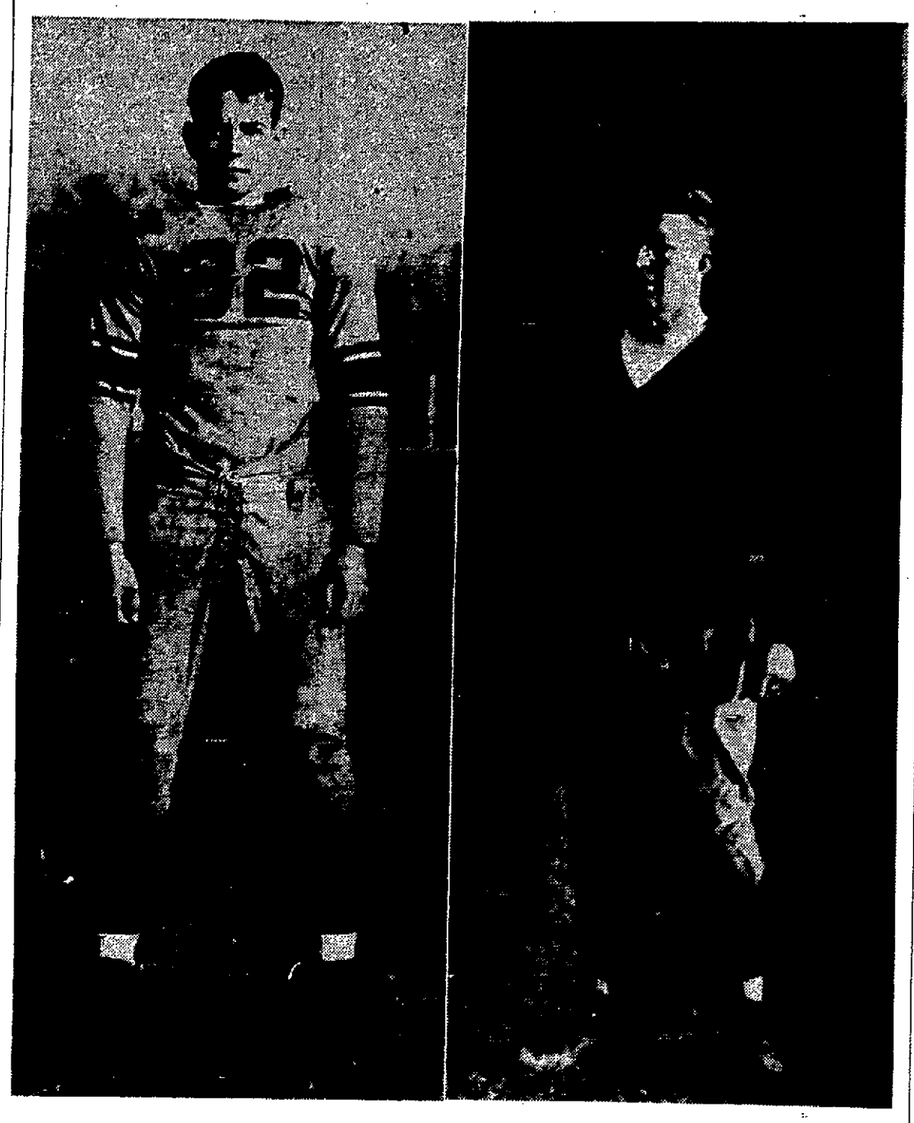
Tygers Face Father-Son Combine Turkey Day



A father-and-son combination that has brought much cheer to Cuyahoga Falls football followers this year will be confronted by the Tygers of Mansfield high school followers in Thursday's post-season game with the northeastern Ohio school at Stadium field. Earl Loucks, sr., right, is coach of the Cuyahoga Falls eleven, and his son, Earl Loucks, jr., left, is the fullback. Loucks formerly coached at Martins Ferry where he turned out several teams which compared with the best in the state.

Rams Honored By Followers

Akron Coaches Speak at Affair Sponsored by Boosters.

Booster club members and team followers last night honored the 1939 Madison high football team at the annual banquet held in the Madison auditorium.

T. W. Dowler, Akron University football coach, and his assistant, Otis Douglas, were the principal speakers.

* * *

Other speakers on the program included Coach Al Fendrick, who presented letters to the Ram squad; Capt. Bill Heichel, Olan LaRue, Madison high superintendent; Wayne E. Miller, school principal; Boyd Robinson, county superintendent; Bill Kopcial, Fendrick's assistant, and Bill Wilkins, star end of the 1938 team, who is attending Akron university. Floyd Dent, Boy Scout executive, was the toastmaster.

* * *

The interesting affair was brought to a close with the showing of motion pictures of the Akron U-Baldwin Wallace game.

No captain for the 1940 team was announced as Coach Fendrick intends to name game captains next fall. An honorary captain will be elected by the players at the end of the season.

DRAW UP SCHEDULE

The schedule for the 1939-40 season will be drawn up at a meeting of City Class A league managers and sponsors at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night. This matter was delayed at a meeting held last night.

Bellville Opens Season Tonight

Bellville high school's 1939-40 basketball team, one of the preseason favorites in the Richland county basketball league race, opens its season by entertaining Howard high at Bellville tonight.

It'll be the Bluejays first game under their new coach, W. H. Miley, who replaces Royd Hodge as head basketball mentor this year.

SUPPLIES DROP 19-0 VERDICT TO BEAVERS

The Mansfield Automotive Supplies dropped a 19 to 0 decision to the Beaver Falls, Pa., Merchants in a semi-pro contest in Beaver Falls Sunday. No details of the game were available. Whether the Supplies play Sunday is not known.

Jim Templeton Fills Position In Tyger Drills

21 Players to Complete High School Grid Careers In Thursday's Tilt With Cuyahoga Falls.

SOPHOMORE JIM TEMPLETON was groomed this week to fill a starting post in the Mansfield high school backfield for the Tygers' post-season game with Cuyahoga Falls at Stadium field at 2:30 p. m. Thursday.

Coach Paul Snyder said today that Templeton will be at Howard Hershey's position if the latter is unable to play.

Hershey suffered a severe shoulder injury in the Shelby game, and it was doubtful today whether the ball carrying star will be able to start in the Turkey Day classic.

* * *

The injury has not responded to treatment as well as Snyder had hoped, and another examination of the shoulder by the team physician late today will determine whether or not Hershey will be in the lineup Thursday.

* * *

Snyder is blessed with capable backfield reserves, but he would prefer to have Hershey in the starting backfield due to his experience.

Templeton, younger brother of Dave, one of the backfield mainstays, is one of the outstanding prospects on the sophomore squad, and Snyder said today he deserves to start Thursday if Hershey is not available due to his splendid play in the Shelby setto.

In addition to passing and running the Tygers in the last half of the final period, Templeton scored one of the touchdowns.

Templeton tips the scales at only 142 pounds, but he is a clever performer in every respect.

Jim LeMunyon, who has been used almost exclusively as a "spot" player this season, will share Hershey's post with Templeton if the injured player is not used.

Hershey is anxious to appear in Thursday's game as it will end his scholastic football career. Although only a junior, Hershey will not be eligible next year because of his age.

Hershey is one of 21 players who will be singing their "swan song" Thanksgiving Day.

* * *

Seniors making their last appearance in Tyger grid livery will be Capt. Mike Horvath, Russell Beer, Ed Goettl, Bob Guegold, Jack Hughes, Jim LeMunyon, Joe Logan, Ross Loughman, Gene Miller, Glendon Parr, John Pfahler, Alex Radovich, Harold Remy, Robert Sandel, Paul Sauder, Marshall Smith, Dave Templeton, Dick Weaver, Dick White and Bill Rowe.

The Tygers completed work for their final game with a light drill this afternoon.

Outside of Hershey, the Tyger squad is in good shape for Cuyahoga Falls, Snyder said.

The Falls team won four games, lost the same number and tied one during the regular season, and Snyder expects the visitors to provide one of the toughest tests faced this year.

Ohio Forgives Panthers, Sign 'Em For 1940

State Gridders to Open Season With Pittsburgh Eleven Next Fall.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Western conference football teams have forgiven a chastened University of Pittsburgh its "athletic sins" of former years and are ready to do battle with the Panthers on the gridiron.

Pitt meets Ohio State Sept. 28 next season, which will be the first game between the Panthers and any Big Ten team since 1936, when they defeated Ohio State, 6-0. Pittsburgh also has contracted to play Purdue and Minnesota in 1941.

The conference unofficially severed relations with Pitt because it did not approve of the latter's athletic policy. But Pitt has since cleaned its athletic skirts.

The resumption of relations renewed and intensified the oft-recurring rumors that Pitt eventually would replace the University of Chicago in the conference. Sources close to the conference insist Chicago has a place in the circuit as long as it wants it.

BRONCHIAL COUGHS DUE TO COLDS

To quickly relieve DISTRESS—when a cold affects your upper bronchial tubes—REMEMBER it takes MORE than "just a salve!" You need to rub your chest, throat and back with a warming, soothing "counter-irritant" like good old reliable Musterole which penetrates the outer layers of the skin and helps break up local congestion and pain. Its soothing vapors ease breathing. Used by millions for over 30 years! 3 strengths: Regular, Children's (mild) and Extra Strong, 40¢. Hospital Size, $3.00.

Dick Poling Picks:

The ratings in this table do not necessarily denote the relative strength of any one team to all other teams in the table. It does denote the relative rating and comparison to that team's opponent.

KEY TO BELOW RATING TABLE

Team listed in CAPITALS is the probable winner. A 3.00 difference in ratings is usually one touchdown difference in computing letters following the opponent's rating denote:—T., a possible tie game; R., possible reverse of choice; TR., a very close game, may tie, either team may win; RR., our choice is reverse of rating. Note: When we RR. we go against our own ratings and very often that is contrary to consensus.

Nova Rally Beats Greenwich, 30 to 22

GREENWICH — Greenwich high's basketball team was the victim of a second-half rally by Nova here last night and dropped a 30 to 22 court decision.

Greenwich gained a slim 8-6 lead in the opening period, but Nova, with Rock leading the attack, knotted the score at 14-all at half-time.

The winners jumped into a 21-20 lead as the clubs went into the final quarter, and then Nova limited Greenwich to one point to annex the affair. Rock collected 10 points. Gifford, Greenwich forward, led his team's attack with nine points.

The Nova seconds defeated the Greenwich reserves, 21 to 20, in a nip-and-tuck preliminary contest.

Grid Stars Held On Assault Count

HOLLYWOOD — (UP) — On a 16-year old girl's story of being assaulted, police today jailed two Ohio professional football players, Dale Prather, 29, and James Robert Davis, 25.

Police said Davis was "Twenty Grand" Davis, former University of Kentucky halfback, who has starred for the Columbus professional team this fall. They were booked on charges of suspicion of assault, together with Wilbur A. Braden, 25, a market clerk, after the girl, whose name was withheld, said she was accosted by the men, taken to Braden's apartment and there attacked.

Davis and Prather denied being implicated. Police said they were members of the Columbus, O., professional football team which played the Los Angeles Bulldogs here Sunday.

BILL FENN of Main Office No. 1 was high in the Mansfield Tire league scoring list at the Meder alleys last night with a 597 count, which included a middle score of 236.

Despite Fenn's total, the Officemen dropped a pair of decisions to Curing Room No. 3.

Weakland, rolling a 584, led Curing Room No. 2 to the best team total, a 2583.

BARONS BATTLE TO REGAIN FIRST PLACE

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Blanked in their last ice showing by the Indianapolis Capitals, the Cleveland Barons will attempt to climb back on top of the International-American Hockey league's western division tonight when they engage the New Haven Eagles.

Two former Barons are sporting New Haven spangles this season. George Patterson and Earl Roche, and the Eagles have the league's most highly-regarded net minder. Wilf Cude, as a threat to Cleveland's bid for a win.

KUHN'S LOVE LETTERS BARED

Bundster Blushes Beet-Red as Jury Hears of 'Terrible' Love for Divorcee.

Heaven sent you and I will never forget that."

"I wrote that," Kuhn said, "on a night we had a big party on the boat. It was all in fun."

The 42-year-old "bundesfuehrer" testified yesterday that Mrs. Camp had repaid in full that $717 which the state charged he had misappropriated from bund funds to pay for moving her furniture.

Kuhn denied he had told Mrs. Camp that his wife was divorced and living in Germany.

He denied telling her that he was quitting the bund because the national officers had "cold feet."

Kuhn's face turned almost beet-red when the love note was read. He was indignant in his denial of its implication.

McCarthy introduced another letter, addressed May 20, 1938, to "My most beloved darling Florence."

"I am thanking you so much," Kuhn wrote, "for your letters. So you gained 15 pounds. Do I love that. I love you. You are so good. I miss in your letters about all the other things. Did your brother Newton start the divorce case?

"They are terrible after me. I am public enemy 1. They are driving me crazy.

"You know I think these Jews are beginning to be afraid of me. . . . I am so lonesome.

"Let me thank you again and again for your wonderful birthday present. This watch is on my wrist and remains with me all the time. I cried when I got it. You would be surprised to know how I would kiss you if you were here."

DROPS 15 CASES IN 'SHAKEDOWN'

Attorney General Dismisses Indictments Resulting From Davey Reign Inquiry.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Indictments against 15 state employes of the Davey state administration, who were accused of "shaking down" civil service workers for campaign contributions, were nolled in Franklin county common pleas court today by Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert.

The indictments were returned by a special grand jury under former Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy.

Two persons, Daniel Earhart, secretary to former Governor Martin L. Davey, and William Alexander, were tried and acquitted.

In moving for the nolling of the other actions, Herbert said that evidence in the remaining cases was no stronger than in the cases of Earhart and Alexander.

"In some of the cases the evidence is much less conclusive," Herbert said. "In view of these verdicts and our investigations of the witnesses I am satisfied there is no chance of conviction in the remaining cases."

Among the persons whose indictments were nolled are: J. Freer Bittinger, Ashland, former speaker of the state house of representatives and a political lieutenant of former Governor Davey; J. O. Kennedy, Millersburg, a former building supervisor; M. Ray Allison, former state finance director and Charles O. Wilson, Columbus, of the old tax commission.

CRASH VICTIM OUT OF HOSPITAL

WILLARD—Harold Caplinger, 20, of Akron, injured when the car in which he was riding crashed into a B. & O. passenger train at a grade crossing on U. S. route 224, Saturday, has been released from the hospital here.

Caplinger was one of four Akron men en route to the Charles Kirkwood farm west of here for a hunting trip. Kenneth Spade, a passenger in the car, was killed in the accident.

SHOOTS WIFE

Husband Held After Attempt to Kill Self; Tell of Quarrel.

WARREN — (INS) — Aaron George, 52, was held under heavy guard in police headquarters today, charged with the shooting of his wife, Mary, 48. Mrs. George was not expected to live.

Police said George shot his wife three times in the head during an argument over whether she would try to find work, then shot himself. The bullet inflicted scalp and ear wounds.

RUNS FOR POST

BUCYRUS—The candidacy of E. W. Smith, Mt. Zion farmer for the Republican nomination for county commisioner subject to the May primaries, was announced today.

In addition to being a farmer, the candidate has had considerable experience as a draftsman in achitecture estimating, and engineering.

Fraternally he is affiliated with the Jr. O. U. A. M.

GALION — Relatives and friends here have received word of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Kentner, of Mt. Gilead, at the Marion City hospital Tuesday morning. Mrs. Kentner was the morning. Mrs. Kentner was the daughter of J. F. Romine.

Wife Still Loyal To Kuhn?

Mrs. Fritz Kuhn, shown above with her husband, was still loyal to the German-American bund leader when this picture was taken. Today's testimony in Kuhn's trial for embezzlement, however, included the revelation of letters which Kuhn wrote to Mrs. Florence Camp, and in which the Bunster professed a "terrible love" for the divorcee.

ASK RENEWAL OF 1939 CONTRACT

Staff Physicians at Hospital Seek Same Fee for Care of Indigents as This Year.

City officials had before them today a request from the staff physicians at General hospital for the renewal of a contract for medical and surgical care of indigent patients.

The request was submitted to Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist by Dr. Charles R. Keller, treasurer of the staff physicians association.

The present contract which has been in effect for the past several years calls an annual fee of $5,000 payable in 12 monthly installments of $416.66.

Nist said the request would be turned over to council's finance committee for consideration when its drafts the annual appropriation bill early in January.

ILLNESS FATAL

J. E. Imhoff, 66, Resided 24 Years in Shelby Vicinity.

SHELBY—Jesse E. Imhoff, 66, resident of this vicinity for 24 years, died Tuesday night at the Shelby Memorial hospital following an illness of three week. Born Aug. 9, 1873, in Monroe county, Mr. Imhoff was a member of First Church of Christ of Shelby, and made his home in Jackson township.

Surviving were his wife, Clara, and two sons, Roy and Clyde, at home; two sisters, Miss Laura Imhoff and Mrs. J. W. Creig, both of Cleveland, and one brother, Frank of Powhatan.

Funeral services will be held at the Dick and Dye funeral home at 2 p. m. Friday with Rev. R. T. Crowe, of First Church of Christ officiating. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery.

GIVES TALK

State Supervisor Addresses Crawford Schoolmen.

BUCYRUS—Dr. C. E. Hutchins, supervisor of transportation in the state department of education discussed problems in school transportation for members of the Crawford County Rural Boards of Education in their semi-annual meeting Monday night at Whetstone school.

Officers were elected and reports given. Earl Eichhorn presided and County Schoo! Superintendent Glen C. West made a short talk.

New officers who will serve during 1940 are Harry Stevens of Polk township, president and Erwin Cook, Whetstone township, clerk.

Members of the boards were informed by the speaker that Crawford county school transportation costs were quite reasonable and complimented members for the type of buses in use in the county.

Eighty members attended the session.

ALUMNI TO MEET

BUCYRUS — Crawford county alumni of Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware will hold their annual banquet meeting in First Evangelical church, Monday, Nov. 27 when Dr. H. J. Bugstahler, newly installed president of the university, will be the guest speaker.

The program will also be featured by campus movies.

E. G. Beal, university trustee and president of the county alumni association will preside.

Miss Evelyn Schieber of Bucyrus is secretary of the group.

Mrs. M. B. Monn was hostess to members of the Ever Ready class recently at her home with Mrs. Della Deidel in charge of the devotional service. Mrs. Ethel Coleman, president, conducted the business meeting when plans were made for the class to hold a dinner meeting and Christmas party next month at the church.

The choir of First Church of Christ will meet for a special rehearsal at 6:45 p. m. The rehearsal will be brief because of the union Thanksgiving service at the United Brethren church.

Members of Alpha Pi Sigma sorority will be guests at a meeting of the Bucyrus chapter of the sorority to be held next Tuesday at Bucyrus. A dinner will be featured. The Shelby girls will meet at the home of Mrs. M. P. Paetznick at 6:30 p. m. where transportation to Bucyrus will be furnished.

SMART TURKEY

She Marches Home With 4 Young Ones On Thanksgiving Eve.

MEDINA — (UP) — There's one turkey on Mrs. Rose Rash's poultry farm, three miles north of Medina, that will escape the oven this Thanksgiving.

She is a hen who came marching into the barn lot with four young poulets.

"It's the first time in my experience that a turkey hen even hatched young in the fall," Mrs. Rash said. "I guess she figured that was the best way to avoid the chopping block."

TAKES OWN LIFE

Ohioan, 72, Shoots Self In Bed as Wife Sleeps on In Peace.

CINCINNATI — (UP) — Phillip Deroo, 72, inmate at the Hamilton county home, shot himself to death in bed today without awakening his wife who was lying beside him, according to Coroner Frank M. Coppock.

Coppock said Deroo, who had been in ill health, had apparently covered himself and placed the barrel of a pistol into his mouth before pulling the trigger. Deputy Sheriff William Bruger said the couple had quarreled during the night.

4 INDICTED IN FATAL EPIDEMIC

State Official and Hospital Heads Accused of Negligence.

KANKAKEE, Ill. — (INS) — Four persons, including State Director of Public Welfare A. L. Bowen, were under indictment today by the Kankakee county grand jury in connection with a recent typhoid epidemic at Manteno state hospital which claimed 53 lives.

In addition to Bowen, those indicted were Dr. Ralph T. Hinton, suspended managing director of the hospital, Mrs. Lillian Williams, hospital dietitian, and Dr. D. L. Steinberg, assistant to Dr. Hinton.

The true bills alleged the four were negligent in not having taken steps to halt the epidemic. In addition, the indictments charged that Bowen and Dr. Hinton had ignored repeated warnings from the state department of health that Manteno's water supply from wells on the grounds was unsafe.

United Presbyterian, First Presbyterian, First Christian and First Congregational, will unite at the Congregational church with Rev. James L. Boyer, pastor of the United Brethren church, delivering the sermon.

The Park Avenue Baptist, St. Matthew's Lutheran and Central Methodist churches will hold their annual service at the Baptist church. Rev. Charles F. Sheriff of St. Matthew's will speak.

Members of St. Paul's and St. Luke's Lutheran churches will have their annual service at St. Luke's church. Rev. Herman L. Gilbert, pastor of St. Paul's church, will preach.

In only 23 states is tomorrow officially Thanksgiving. Twenty others, including the New England states, where the holiday has special significance, President Roosevelt's action in moving up the holiday date a week was ignored and Thanksgiving will be celebrated Nov. 30.

Five other states, Nebraska, Colorado, Texas, Idaho and New Mexico compromised and decided to observe both days.

Ohio will "go along with the president" as the result of a proclamation issued by Gov. John W. Bricker calling for the state to observe Thanksgiving Nov. 23.

At Ohio Northern university students will celebrate both the 23rd and 30th. There will be no classes tomorrow, but students will have to return on Friday for classes. The following week the annual Thanksgiving vacation will begin and carry through the week-end.

Telegraph companies will deliver holiday greetings on both days.

In a Thanksgiving message to teachers and principals of city schools today, Supt. W. L. Miller pointed out the reasons why Americans should be particularly thankful this year.

Among them were: "because the nation's granaries are filled to overflowing with harvested crops while the cattle on a thousand hills are sleek and fat; because during the year we have been spared any major disasters on sea, land or in the air; because the churches of our land are untouched by the hand of the state and we are free to worship where, when and as we please; because as a nation we still are able to discern the difference between right and might, and as free men, to cling to the one and spurn the other."

Students Honor Tyger Squad at Pep Rally Today

Students and faculty members of Senior high school joined in a pep rally in the auditorium this morning honoring Mansfield Tyger gridders who meet Cuyahoga Falls tomorrow in a post-season game at Stadium field.

Paul Snyder, football coach, and Mike Horvath, team captain, spoke briefly and Warren Bradford and Dorothy Blackstone, representing the student body, paid tribute to the team and coaches for the showing made during the past season.

The 20 senior members of the squad who will be playing their final game tomorrow were introduced to the student body. A Le-Moine Derr, led the students in singing school songs.

sister, visiting for 45 minutes until the judge and Mr. Bender returned. Then I excused myself and left. I was never there again."

He said the next time he saw Miss Bender was in a Cleveland hospital after she had her baby. He said Miss Sina K. Evans, a social worker, and Miss Bender's brother, Joe, were with him.

"I asked her who the baby's father was, but she wouldn't answer," the sheriff said. "She said she had got $97 in a letter from Elyria, but had thrown the envelope away."

He said he took the brother home and then drove Miss Evans to the neighborhood house, where they parked for about 10 minutes.

"Suddenly a man stuck his head in the car window," Finegan testified. "It was Miss Bender's brother, John. He scared me. He asked what we were going to do about Mary. I said, 'John, there's nothing I can do'."

Asked whether he ever had been in Gas House Hill lane with Miss Bender, as she had testified, he answered: "That's false."

At one point in the trial today, Miss Bender jumped to her feet and shouted, "You're lying, Miss Evans," while Miss Evans was testifying concerning Miss Bender's conduct at the settlement house. She said Miss Bender once brought liquor into the place.

Miss Bender's attorney was rebuked by the court.

Miss Bender accused Finegan of being the father of Patricia Ann, born July 4, 1937, in a Cleveland hospital. Defense witnesses, however, testified that there was evidence that a 74-year-old Lorain municipal judge was the father of the baby.

Special deputies were at the doors of the courtroom to prevent overcrowding. Judge Guy B. Findley warned the crowd to remain quiet several times.

Miss Bender, who held her baby during part of Tuesday's hearing, testified that she had written a note to Judge W. P. Duffy when she was in the hospital, asking him for money, but she said she wanted "a loan."

She also testified that Judge Duffy was a long-time friend of her family and that she had known him 20 years. She indignantly denied that she ever had received $350 from him.

Mrs. Janet Andrews of Cleveland, a former nurse, testified for the defense that Miss Bender had given her the note to mail to Judge Duffy and told her that he was the father of the child.

Police Chief Theodore Walker of Lorain, Patrolman Clarence Hunker of Lorain, and Corporal James A. Bower of the state highway patrol at Lorain testified that they had ordered Miss Bender to remain away from their respective departments.

'Reputation Questionable.'

Miss Helen Coniam of Elyria and Miss Mildred Bond of Lorain, former social workers, testified that Miss Bender's reputation was questionable.

Miss Bender told of alleged trysts with Finegan in the "Gas House Hill Lane."

"We went there so no one could see us," she told the jury.

She said they began using the place for their purported trysts in July, 1936.

"What time of day was this?" Defense Attorney Don Meyers asked.

"I don't remember," she replied. "Carl can tell you.

"We went there frequently, the last time being in October, the day after my birthday, when Carl got a bottle and we went there to celebrate.

"The next month I kidded him about having a family and his attitude changed. He began breaking dates and he wasn't the perfect lover any more."

"How many times did he see you at home when your family was there?" asked Meyers.

"I don't know how many times or who else was there," she replied.

"The house could have burned down and I would not have cared as long as Carl and I would be safe.

"From January to July, Carl never saw me and wouldn't answer my letters. When my baby was born he came in to the hospital with Miss Evans (a social worker) and she said to me:

"'You are a nobody and Carl is a man-about-town. How can you say these things about him?' Carl told me not to worry if I should have a baby because he would take care of me."

She said the fathers name was not on the baby's birth certificate because it was against the regulations of her church to record the father's name in cases of illegiti-

PRE-HOLIDAY SESSION QUIET, LEADERS DOWN

Followers of Steels Cheered by Report Production Pace to Continue.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stock market leaders went into a crawling retreat today with here and there a selected issue pushing a little higher.

Off most of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas, Westinghouse Electric, Johns-Manville, Pennsylvania, Western Union and Union Carbide.

Those resistant included Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, American Radiator, Chesapeake & Ohio and Consolidated Edison.

Failure of any group to take leadership was attributed to tomorrow's holiday, with most traders merely engaged in evening up operations.

Followers of the steels discussed the "Iron Age" assertion that the industry's present record rate of ingot production probably would continue to the end of the year with little variation and that January output would be likewise high.

The periodical said new orders, as distinguished from those already on the books, were apparently heavy enough to support operating rates of from 65 to 80 per cent of capacity, and with the heavy backlogs piled up in the last few months, were sufficient to support strong mills schedules through at least part of the first quarter.

Engineering construction awards for the week ended Nov. 21, as reported by "Engineering News Record," totaled $47,655,000 against the unusually high total of $96,416,000 the previous period and $49,970,000 a year ago.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring spots affecting the outer or surface layer of the skin often result from a temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing.

You can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment whose medication stays in active contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For nearly 45 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritated o ducts where many surface pimpl start, and aids healing. Carefully cleansing the skin with Resinol Soap helps to quicken the pleasing results. Its gently active lather is refreshing and it rinses easily.

Buy a jar of Resinol Ointment and cake of Resinol Soap from any druggist. For free sample, write Resinol, Dept. 89, Baltimore, Md.

ITALIAN SHIP STRIKES MINE

6,660-Ton Steamer Damaged in Blast Off Southeast Coast of England.

Britain resorted in the second year of the World war—is aimed at throttling sources of foreign exchange with which to buy war materials.

The British admiralty announced today that a German ship, the Bertha Fisser, had been intercepted by a British warship near Iceland.

A brief announcement here said the German crew started to sink their ship and took to their boats, and that they later were picked up by a British warship.

The Bertha Fisser is a 4,110-ton freighter, built in 1919, belonging to the Emden firm of Fisser and Von Doornum.

(A dispatch from Reykjavik, Iceland, indicated the German freighter may have been shelled. The dispatch reported that a freighter "of uncertain identity" was shelled by a warship off the Iceland coast, and that it later was breaking up on the rocks. Wreckage drifting ashore carried the name "Bertha Fischer," the dispatch said, although the name "Ada" and the registry port of "Bergen" were carried on the vessel's side.)

750 Workers Get $8,000 In Belated Jobless Benefits

Nearly $8,000 in belated unemployment compensation will be distributed to 750 workers in Richland and Morrow counties within the next month, C. W. Handley, district manager of the state bureau of unemployment compensation said today.

He added that the checks will go to persons whose unemployment checks were miscalculated when benefit payments started early this year.

Checks which will be mailed from the Columbus office will range from $1 up to $100, Handley said, with the average check being slightly over $10.

Persons eligible for the additional funds already have been notified by mail and have been requested to make formal application for the funds at the district office here.

Those sharing in the $8,000 distributions are persons who filed claims for benefits prior to Feb. 23 and on whose wages a recheck has been made by the unemployment bureau.

Distribution of the money was made possible after a ruling of the supreme court which declared that the "average weekly wage" was computed at a lower rate than was specified by law, Handley said.

CHAPTER ONE

Four heads turned gravely, but no one spoke when the girl came into the drawing room. She dropped a tennis racquet on a chair and, untying a silk bandana, dropped it beside the racquet. She ran long, slender fingers through her hair that was the hue and texture of corn silk. With that gesture she lifted it from her shoulders to where it hung framing the oval of her face. She crossed the room in long, easy strides and dropped an elbow on the mantle, facing the others from the hearth.

Her eyes, gray and long-lashed, were amused as they swept the room. They were also a trifle hard. Speaking in a cool detached voice that revealed the sort of finishing schools she had lately attended, she said:

"The curtain rises! It is late afternoon in September. The scene: The drawing room of the Comtesse de Ligne. The characters on stage are the heirs of the late Elihu Willoughby . . ."

The Comtesse de Ligne gave her daughter a glance of despair. "Heirs!" she repeated, and put a lace handkerchief to her mouth.

Fabienne gave her mother a glance in which pity was not apparent and continued:

"You've always been so proud of your flare for the dramatic, mother. Doesn't this little scene appeal to you?" She covered the room with a gesture that included the two middle-aged people, sitting calmly by the window: her mother, the posed figure of tragedy in the high-backed carved chair; the tall, good-looking boy trying, with no success, to palm a coin as he had seen it done.

The telephone rang and the four heads turned again to the door. Only Fabienne's remained turned to the window. The telephone call was not the one they were waiting for. Fabienne began to speak again:

"So like a stage set. Uncle Mark, looking exactly what he is—the distinguished scholar, and Aunt Edna, practically labeled: Uncle Mark's. And Dick, darling, unable to conceal his impatience to escape this little family party and get back to Cambridge. As for you, mother, you look like the program note: Costumes by Mainbocher." She looked toward the wide door. "Ah, the perfect note! The butler enters!"

Marcus, old and distinguished as any theatrical butler, brought the evening papers in and laid them on a table.

"I suppose, there's something in the papers," Gertrude de Ligne said.

Her son slid the coin he had been playing with into his pocket and came across the room to pick up a paper. He scanned the front page. "Here it is," he told her. "Shall I read it?"

The others nodded.

"'Elihu Willoughby will entire fortune to charity,'" he read. "The contents of the will of the late Elihu Willoughby, whose death occurred in Paris on July 10, were announced today. The millionaire manufacturer bequeathed his entire fortune, estimated at more than five million dollars, to charitable and educational institutions.'"

Gertrude said, "Why doesn't Neilson call? He should have kept this ridiculous story out of the newspapers. We'll be the laughing stock . . ."

Fabienne said, "Continue, Dick."

"'The sum of one dollar each is left to the surviving seven members of his family, for whom, the will read, the millionaire has provided amply.'"

Gertrude sniffed loudly.

• • •

Her son gave her a short glance and went on. "'With the exception of the old Willoughby mansion—long a landmark in the heart of the Henderson street district—which is left as an outright gift to the Henderson Street Settlement house with the proviso that it is to be known hereafter as Willoughby house, all other gifts are in the form of trust funds, etc.'"

"Don't read any more!" Gertrude cried.

"Oh, mother, please don't be so dramatic." Fabienne said disgustedly. She dropped into a low chair and picked up a magazine as though the bottom of their luxurious world were not about to drop out.

Mark Willoughby fished an old pipe from his pocket, looked at his wife and slipped it back. He said "Perhaps Edna and I had better be running along. I doubt if Neilson can get any definite word today. It takes a long time to learn if you can break a will."

Gertrude flashed an angry glance at her brother. "It wouldn't matter to you would it, Mark? You and Edna live quite handsomely on the trust fund our grandfather gave you when you were married. But think of me—and my children's future."

• • •

The latter was so obviously an afterthought her children exchanged glances and Dick said "We wouldn't be penniless . . . I'm not sure the old man was being so unkind at that. He had to make his own money and he got some fun out of it. We didn't and we've always had plenty of it but what's it got us?"

He didn't qualify the things he said and no one answered him. They all knew how grandfather's money had been squandered. Gertrude, more than any of them, knew how she had squandered her fortune on her two, now deceased spendthrift husbands.

"I'm thinking of Fab," she said. "She's got to marry. She's been out four years now. With competition what it is, and so few eligible men, and now no money, what chance has she?"

A cynical smile touched the girl's lips. "I have big eyes, a beautiful figure, play the guitar and my friends call me cute," she said sardonically.

Gertrude wasn't listening. She said, "I've trained Fab . . ."

Fabienne threw her magazine on the floor and sat bolt upright. ". . . to ride, fence, dance and fly," she finished. "I've been presented at the Court of St. James. I know how to address a dignitary and seat ranking ambassadors. Nothing less than a crown prince should do for little Fab. I wouldn't be of any use to a real man. That's what you've trained me for, mother! Would you like to hear more?"

Gertrude's eyes glittered coldly as she turned to her daughter.

Edna said mildly, "Now, Fab, don't talk to your mother that way. We're all upset . . ."

Marcus came to the door with a telephone in his hand. "It's Mr. Neilson, madame," he said, plugging it into the wall and giving Gertrude the instrument.

She talked for a moment, and then replacing the instrument in its cradle, she told them, "He says it's hopeless. The will must stand. Waht shall we do now?"

Dick told her. "You can live on your income, Mom. Fab has five hundred a month and I expect to go to work in June. We're not going to starve."

• • •

Gertrude was not listening. She had fixed her eye on her daughter. "Fabienne, you must marry Nicky."

Across the room the girl's hot, defiant eyes met those of her mother. And suddenly she knew how she felt about her. Her mother, who had never been a mother to her, who had sent her to Mark and Edna, and who now looked upon her as a commodity, a piece of marriagable property.

Marry Nicky Bartlett and his millions now? She'd been thinking of it ever since she was 16, but now she knew she would not, if only to defeat her mother's hopes. She . . . she'd go to work first.

Marcus came to the door once more. "Mr. Bartlett is calling," he announced.

Fabienne threw her mother a long, terrible look. "Show him in," she said.

CHAPTER TWO

"Perfect entrance." Fabienne whispered to no one in particular when Nicky Bartlett came into the drawing room.

His smile, beneath his neat mustache, was a blend of anticipation and realized pleasure. His eyes included all of them as he went directly to Gertrude de Ligne and bent over her hand. Rising, he spoke to Edna Willoughby, gave his hand to Mark and then to Dick and came to stand beside Fabienne, as if that were his place.

She said, "Hi, feller, how'd you know this was the psychological moment to arrive?"

He snapped open a paper-thin gold cigarette case and held it out to her. "Something exciting going on?"

Fabienne took a long time over lighting her cigaret from his lighter. Then she blew a straight smoky column before she answered.

"We've been cut off without a sou. Or haven't you read the papers today?"

"Oh, THAT." Yes, Nicky did things well. Nicky did things in the good taste that Gertrude talked so much about, without always being quite sure of what she meant. Gertrude often got form mixed up with taste.

"We can't believe it, Nicky," Gertrude said pathetically.

"Should I offer condolences?" His question was for Gertrude, but his glance was to Fabienne.

"Not at all," she answered before her mother could speak. "We're all going to make something of ourselves. A nice fresh start with no filthy lucre to tie us down. We're going to work, Dick and me."

"Isn't she droll, Nicky? Darling, it's getting on toward seven. Hadn't you better dress for dinner?"

"Why, mother! Poor folk don't dress for dinner. However, I'll get cleaned up. Played some good tennis today, Nicky, with Sue Auchincloss." Fabienne aimed nearly at the hearth with her cigaret and made it. "I'll put on something dancesish if you'll take me to the Petite Taborine tonight, Nicky."

"Last flare before she becomes one of the working masses," Dick explained.

"She's not serious about working, is she?" Nicky wanted to know after Fabienne had left the room.

"Of course not. She's piqued with me because I'm solicitous about her. I want her to get married, Nicky, and I know she wants to. I think the child's romantic. I think she wants to be swept off her feet." Gertrude paused for a moment and then abruptly said something about that day's polo. She hoped that Nicky had taken the hint she had put rather boldly.

After all, it was time that Nicky stopped allowing Fabienne to twist him around her finger. He had been courting Fabienne for—Gertrude calculated hastily—twelve years. Ever since the summer she had taken the child to Maryland to visit her dead father's parents. They were only twelve and sixteen then, but already Nicky had been brow-beaten by her own willful daughter.

Marcus came in with a tray of cocktails.

"Nicky, do you know the Prochets? They gave a most amusing party on Monday . . ." Gertrude chatted amiably as if she had not spent the past seven hours in storms of tears and anger. Now that Nicky was there everything would be quite all right.

Yes, Nicky would know the Prochets. He knew all the right people, the right tailors, the most dependable brokers, the rating of every club worth while. To know and do the right things was Nicky's whole life. He had never done a day's work in all his twenty-eight years. But there had been no need of it; he was the heir to the Bartlett tobacco millions.

Fabienne was a fool not to grab him. "My daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Bartlett," the Countesse de Ligne would say in the drawing rooms of London and Paris that still knew her.

Fabienne came in wearing something sleek in ice-blue satin that made her look a head taller than Nicky.

"Doesn't she look sweet?" her mother said fondly.

"An awfully good buy, Nicky. Reduced today." Fabienne said, and her voice took on a hard edge that was like the hard light in her eyes earlier.

"Cocktail, dear? We'll have dinner in a few minutes."

"No, thanks. Nicky's taking me out to dinner." She didn't want to stay another minute. She knew all the things her mother would say for Nicky's benefit. Accumulated anger gathered in her breast.

She said goodby to them all, kissed her uncle and aunt and said to her brother, "Give my best to John Harvard and come and see me when I take a walk-up."

Nicky had a car that was, as one might suppose, long and sleek and as expensive as possible. Which was hardly the basis of any objection to Fabienne Seymour who preferred the luxurious.

Fabienne belonged in that car, she thought approvingly. She looked the part. Her slippers had cost thirty dollars; her gown, simple and arresting as an exclamation point, was a French original and her short jacket of perfectly matched sables had been last year's Christmas present to herself from herself with love.

Nicky looked as if he belonged in that car, too. But then Nicky always looked right—at the tiller of his sailboat, in his pink coat at the Hunt Breakfast, riding steeplechase, playing fast polo, flying his speed plane.

She could have this car, and a town car, and a plane of her own if she wished. She'd always look right amid the possessions that Nicky could give her, and Nicky was waiting for her to say that she'd take them—and him.

Why didn't she say it? Her mother was right. There was nothing else for her but marriage. She'd loathe working. Besides, what could she do? She couldn't sing in a night club. She wouldn't sell things. She was utterly useless as far as earning any money went. And she'd have to have money. Five hundred a month would be little better than nothing after Gertrude closed the apartment and went back to Paris. She'd have to take on an apartment for herself.

Nicky said, "What's all this about 'making something of yourself'?"

"Oh, so you think it's too amusing, do you?" She said it sharply, her resentment against everything finding its expression against luckless Nicky.

"Ridiculous, not amusing," he corrected, unfortunately choosing the one word that was a red flag to her.

"Well, you know my views about such things. We've discussed them before—if you remember."

He ducked as if her words were blows. "Are you going to start that line about my going to work again? Because if you are, my good girl, I'll only bore you by saying the same things over again. I've got plenty of money and plenty of time and plenty to do with both. Would you want me to take a job that some poor guy needs?"

"Couldn't you find a job to make for yourself? Make something useful of yourself instead of being a . . . a playboy?"

"I might do social work," he said laughingly.

It was the way he laughed that added fuel to the fire kindled by her mother. It blazed, and suddenly she thought she knew a way to make her mother know how deep her resentment was.

The idea was born. Fabienne gloated over it gleefully.

"Look, Nicky," she said in a tone that indicated her annoyance with him was forgotten. "I've got an idea playing around in the back of my mind. I want to scare mother. Will you drive me down to Willoughby house in the morning?"

Fabienne little knew what a sweeping tide that wavelet of an idea was to prove.

900 Convicts at Folsom Prison Stage Hunger Strike

SERVED SOUR MUSH, FELONS REFUSE FOOD

Demonstration Might Result in Withholding of Special Thanksgiving Meal.

(By International News Service)

FOLSOM PRISON, Cal.—Folsom prison—California's penitentiary for two-time losers and incorrigibles—seethed with unrest today as prison authorities strove to quell an incipient revolt occasioned by a hunger strike of 900 desperate felons.

Ten asserted ringleaders of the hunger strike were sent to solitray confinement by warden Clyde Plummer.

The demonstration started yesterday morning when the convicts refused to eat sour mush served at breakfast. At lunch they banged on their tables, catcalled and refused to eat.

At dinner time, they filed into the mess hall, turned on their benches and sat with arms folded, their backs to tables. Their evening meal remained untouched.

The breakfast mush, explained Warden Plummer, had been prepared the previous night, contrary to custom. Ordinarily, he said, it is cooked just before the meal. Overnight the mush soured.

Trouble Begins.

"It was slightly sour," the warden said. "Not altogether bad, but not so good. However, some 300 members of the 'brush gang" of convicts, which goes to eat first, ate the stuff, then the 'main line' of 900 prisoners was brought in. That's when trouble began."

Plummer said the demonstration might result in withholding 7,000 pounds of pork slaughtered at Folsom for Thanksgiving dinner. Final decision on the annual feast, he said, would be determined by the felons' behavior today.

Burglar Ransacks 2 Homes, Leaves Clue—A Button

Police today were searching for a burglar with a button missing from his coat who ransacked two west side homes last night while the owners were asleep.

Officers said they found the button on a window sill where the man had forced his way into one of the homes.

The small but significant bit of evidence was discovered at the home of G. W. Hall, 425 Rowland avenue. Police said the burglar ransacked the house while Mr. and Mrs. Hall were asleep and carried off a purse containing $14 and a fountain pen.

The purse looted of its contents was found on the rear porch.

At the home of L. C. Beilstein, 471 Hill avenue, believed to have been entered by the same burglar, a $21 pair of glasses was stolen after the house had been ransacked.

Williams admitted in court that he fired five rifle shots at Maxine Edwards, 20-year-old Miami university co-ed of Navarre, O., because she spurned his attentions.

BAN ON GERMAN EXPORTS FLAYED

Neutrals Protest as British Announce Blockade; Called Retaliation Move.

Germany has been doing on allied and neutral shipping in the North Sea.

The blockade will come as an order in council, issued by the cabinet with the king presiding. It was announced yesterday by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

The purpose of the blockade is to shut off Germany's foreign exchange, with which she buys war materials.

The list of countries it will affect was indicated in last year's list of German customers. Foremost of these, in the order of their German imports, were: Brazil, United States, Argentina, China and Japan.

Germany was not expected to accept this attempt at economic isolation without a fight. British leaders wondered what form the German reply would take and some thought it would be the long-expected mass bombing raids.

The latest ship casualty, the Fianona, was reported struck by a mine three or four miles from the southeast British coast. She was still afloat but badly damaged and it had not been learned whether any of her crew of 33 had been injured.

These minings provide the excuse for the export blockade, and the order in council was expected to go into the subject fully. Under British interpretations of international law, an export blockade is permissable only in retaliation for law violations by the enemy and it is Britain's contention that Germany has violated international law by sowing mines in commercial shipping lanes without notification.

SHELBY TROOP OPENS QUARTERS

SHELBY—Don Montoya of Mansfield, field executive of the Johnny Appleseed area of the Boy Scouts, was the guest speaker at the formal opening of the new scout room in the filter house at the municipal water plant Tuesday night.

The room at the water plant was donated for the use at a meeting place for Troop 1 of the Scouts by the city. The members of the troop under the leadership of Henry Betts, scoutmaster, have completed renovation of the room by the installation of a wood floor, fire place and other necessary equipment.

WHAT, NO BODY?

Police Report Proves to Be Bag Stuffed With Grape Pulp.

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Cleveland police today received this report—"Body in burlap bag back of Hart Manufacturing company."

The police have been alert to such reports because of the unsolved torso murders here. A squad went to investigate.

Detective Sergeant James T. Hogan, head of the homicide squad, reported a short time later that the bag contained nothing more than a mass of grape pulp.

TO HOLD COURT

BUCYRUS—Sunday Dec. 10 has tentatively been set as the date of the Boy Scout Court of Honor to be held for scouts of the Harding area. Among the awards to be given will be the advancement to Eagle Scout to James Gebhardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Gebhardt who was declared eligible at a court of honor at Camp Owen last summer.

Scout Commissioner James McFarland is in charge of arrangements.

GALION — Releases from Good Samaritan hospital Tuesday were: Mrs. W. C. Hocker to her home on Gill avenue; Mrs. Richard Campbell and son, and Mr. R. Fisher to his home on Gill avenue. Mrs. Albert Sautter of Route 2, underwent an operation at the Good Samaritan hospital Tuesday morning.

ARREST DRIVER AFTER ACCIDENT

State Patrolmen Cite Columbus Autoist for Carelessness; $10 Fine Suspended.

A Columbus motorist was arrested on charges of careless and reckless driving as the result of three accidents reported in the Mansfield area yesterday afternoon in which four persons escaped injuries.

Jacob G. Hoffman, Columbus, was given a $10 suspended fine yesterday afternoon when he was found guilty in municipal court of careless and reckless driving as the result of an accident on route 30-S at 12:45 p. m. He pleaded innocent. Hoffman said he carried insurance. He was ordered to pay court costs of $7.30.

He was arrested by highway patrolmen after his car struck an auto driven by Earl L. Charles, jr., as Charles was making a left turn on the Park avenue west road, two miles west of Mansfield.

Gerald Ruley, 27 Arthur avenue, Mansfield, and Corwin Leslie Kreachbaun, 24, of Canal Winchester, O., escaped injuries in a two-truck collision at 4 p. m. yesterday in South Boulevards at the intersection of route 42 and Beachwood drive.

The trucks collided when Kreachbaum attempted to pass Ruley as the latter was making a left turn, highway patrolmen reported. In a futile effort to avoid the accident Kreachbaum swerved his truck into a field, officers said.

Highway patrolmen and wrecking crews this morning were still attempting to pull a truck driven by W. B. Parten of Birmingham, Ala., out of a ditch on route 42, one mile north of Mt. Gilead. The truck backed across the highway from a gasoline station and into a ditch at 4 p. m. yesterday when the brakes failed to hold. Parten was in the station at the time.

KEEPS PROMISE

Still Out of War, Roosevelt in Warm Springs Again.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga.—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt made good today on his seven and one-half month old promise to return to Georgia this fall, "if we don't have a war."

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, the president arrived at the winter "Little White House" at Warm Springs, Va., this morning at 11 a. m. for the Thanksgiving holiday.

His arrival recalled his prophetic remark last April when he left Warm Springs after his last visit. On the train platform, Mr. Roosevelt waved goodbye to a few friends, saying:

"I'll be back in the fall if we don't have a war."

Mr. Roosevelt brought with him a skeleton staff to keep him constantly informed of developments in Europe.

COLLISION KILLS FARMER

LETS CONTRACT TO HIGH BIDDER

City Awards Sanitary Sewer Job to Darling Company on Bid of $1,961.

The city today had accepted the highest of three bids for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Cook road. The contract was awarded to R. O. Darling and Sons company on its offer of $1,961.40.

Darling's bid was $158 higher than the lowest bid of $1,803.40 submitted by Richard A. Thayer of Galion and $132 above the $1,832.75 bid submitted by Roger Au of Mansfield.

Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist who let the contract said that property owners who will be assessed for the sewer job wanted Darling to do the job.

The contract for the construction of a sanitary sewer on an alley running north from Central avenue was let to Au who bid $353.60. Au's proposal was $31 lower than the bid submitted by Darling, the only other bidder.

Nist also advertised for bids today on a station wagon to replace an 11-year-old touring car now used by the city engineering department. Bids on the new truck will be accepted by the board of control until noon Dec. 12.

Specifications call for the delivery of a 1940 model station wagon, fully equipped and including five six-ply tires at a cost not to exceed $1,000.

BUCYRUS PLANS RE-ROUTING OF CITY'S TRAFFIC

Council Studies Proposal to Extend Street; Fire, Police Expansion Proposed.

BUCYRUS—City council Tuesday night studied plans for extending a Bucyrus street to create a new state highway within the city and plans to increase both the fire and police departments.

The highway project, if adopted, would extend Whetstone street from Mansfield street to the Plymouth road, alongside the Bucyrus County club, to reroute traffic on highway 98 (Bucyrus and Plymouth road) into Bucyrus by way of the new cutoff and the Lincoln highway.

This would eliminate three grade crossings on the present 98 route and bring the road into the city through the recently completed underpass on East Mansfield street. Further consideration will be given the plan by a special committee to be named by Council President Loomis.

Advocates of the plan told council that the highway department is planning now to reroute No. 98 by way of the reservoir road to a point two miles east of Bucyrus. If the city asks for the Whetstone street extension and if the request is approved the present rerouting plan would be abandoned, it was said.

Two ordinances to increase the personnel of both the fire and police departments were presented. The firemen's ordinance passed because state laws require working hours contrary to those now being followed in the department. The police ordinance failed to come to a vote, when council entered into a discussion relative to the advisability of increasing that force in the face of financial conditions.

Chief of Police Arthur Stuckert argued in favor of the ordinance and asked for immediate passage, but the ordinance committee argued that sufficient time had not been given council to study the proposal.

Under the terms of the firemen's ordinance, which was passed, two firemen are to be added at a salary of $1,380 for the first year; $1,500 for the second and $1,620 for the third. The same salaries would apply to the new policemen in addition to providing a $10 a month raise for one patrolman, Anton Spaeth, who is designated in the ordinance as an identification officer.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1939.

Drive carefully tomorrow—even a minor accident is no cause for giving thanks.

From the slow way in which the war on the western front has been progressing it might be mistaken for a government project.

Bookie joint operators are surely too ingenious to let a little thing like cutting off wire service put them out of business—as long as they keep on friendly terms with the police.

War Isolation Impossible

NEUTRAL NATIONS in the combat zone of the war in Europe are unhappy about the American neutrality act. It has injured their normal commerce with the United States, which amounted in some instances to scores of millions of dollars. Their ports are already suffering from the absence of our cargo ships and the goods they would carry.

Ireland, Belgium and the Scandinavian countries have expressed their anxiety and urged that some way be found to permit access to them in spite of their nearness to the war. Iceland is preparing to act as a link between the United States and the northern European neutrals. Our own shipping interests, exporters and seamen are equally troubled about their financial future.

Meanwhile Australia, needing to conserve dollar exchange, has adopted a policy of rationed imports from the United States. The plan is to cut its purchase of our oil one-fourth, and severely to restrict buying in other lines such as tobacco, automobile bodies, luxury apparel, foodstuffs and patent medicines, normally large items in Australian trade with us. The war goods Australia buys may not compensate for these cuts for months or even years.

Many countries can stay out of war and so avoid its most disastrous effects, but none can enjoy complete safety and isolation.

Night Football for Mansfield High

DECISION of the Mansfield board of education to permit high school participation in night football, starting next season, accords with similar action in a number of other Ohio cities.

Except in a local sense, night football cannot be regarded as an innovation as it has passed the experimental stage in many cities and has been approved by various school and college authorities.

With lighting facilities made possible by progress in electrical illumination, the matter of watching the play, either in baseball or football, offers no obstacles to night games, and it has also been demonstrated that Friday night games, for high school teams, attract larger attendance than Saturday afternoon games, probably due to lack of college competition within motoring distance.

Principal objection to earlier acceptance of night football in Mansfield seems to have hinged largely on different views in regard to the best interests of players and other students, and if it is demonstrated that night games can be played without physical bad effects on players or sacrifice of scholastic excellence by the student body as a whole, there is no apparent reason why Mansfield should remain almost alone in cities of its class by banning night games.

In any event, it would seem that the experiment is worth trying—always keeping in mind that public school systems are established and maintained in order to provide well balanced education, rather than to allow athletics to assume a dominating place in the program.

B. & O. Stockholder Speaks His Mind

THE SUGGESTION made by a stockholder of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad—that the railroad rehabilitate its stations and "wash the windows"—makes a strong appeal to Mansfield people.

On all the vast stretches of B. & O. right of way there is probably no more obvious anachronism than the dilapidated passenger station of that railroad in Mansfield.

The station has been a municipal eye-sore for a number of years—and has constantly been taking on a more disreputable appearance—despite frequently-made promises that "something would be done about it."

Granted that, in this particular instance, passenger business on this division does not justify any considerable investment in a new station, the fact remains that Mansfield freight business is a worth-while item, and, as the stockholder at the Baltimore meeting said: "How can your employes and the public have any confidence in an organization that doesn't even wash the windows of its buildings?"

As the successor of the pioneering railroad which ran the first train into Mansfield, this city deserves better of the B. & O. than that it should continue to be disgraced by such a passenger station.

Americas Discover Each Other

TWO SOUTH AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS have received the first Mario Moors Cabot prizes in journalism. These awards were established at Columbia University, New York, by Dr. Godfrey Lewell Cabot of Boston, to recognize the services of the press as an agency of public education in the Americas. La Prensa of Buenos Aires and El Comercio of Lima, Peru, were chosen because of their "journalistic achievement which advances public understanding and sympathy between the peoples of any two countries in the Western Hemisphere."

The presentation of the bronze plaques for the papers and gold medals for their editors was made by Dr. Butler, president of the university. The head of the Columbia school of journalism and Mayor LaGuardia spoke. Many publishers, educators and editors were present.

This is but one of many interesting developments in the awakening of North and South American interest in the family of nations of the Western Hemisphere. An increasing exchange of students and teachers is another. So, too, are conferences on such subjects as health, architecture, transportation, and others.

There is a strong flow of travel between the two continents which began when war checked travel to Europe and the Orient, and is increasing rapidly as travelers discover the variety of culture, scenery and entertainment offered.

It might make the affair more interesting if three championship contenders were booked for the same evening, with Joe Louis taking them on in quick succession.

Out in California the Piutes have a tribal rule that visiting relatives may stay no longer than two weeks—and still some folks have an idea that Indians are dumb.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—In the days of Sothern and Marlows and Mrs. Fiske it was one of the accepted and lovable traditions of the theater for a star to maintain an almost permanent acting company season after season. The same actors moved on from play to play with the stars, thus insuring long and uninterrupted jobs for players in minor parts.

On a brief and sudden journey away from Broadway recently I stumbled onto what is probably the only such institution left backstage today—the Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne troupe now staging a merry holiday across country in Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew."

It is such a gay and madcap version of the Bard's farce that they have produced you become convinced first that Shakespeare must be whirling in his grave and, a short time later in their performance, you would not be surprised at any moment to see William S. himself, in person, walk on stage.

But, it was after the performance that I caught a real glimpse of this acting company and their stars. Most of the actors in the large company have appeared with the Lunts in three, four and even more productions.

* * *

WHEN the final curtain is down they adjourn to a restaurant near the theater where they all have their midnight supper; few actors eat before a performance, as a meal is inclined to make them stodgy on the stage.

Tables are drawn together and the actors gather around the stars, making it seem like the dinner scene in "You Can't Take It With You." For actors can't eat without interrupting for conversation and they can't conduct conversation without acting out what they are saying. Often it is as good a show as the one they have just finished on the stage.

And all is not raillery, idle conversation. They coach one another on how to play certain scenes, help one another settle personal problems, chide one another for mistakes.

This night in the cafe around the corner from the stage door they had pulled a half dozen tables together so that it resembled a medieval banquet board with Lunt presiding at its head. There was much laughter around the table as the troupe bantered with S. Thomas Gomez, an excellent actor, over his eating prowess.

* * *

GOMEZ began this night with a mere two dozen oysters on the half shell. That appetizer put away, he waded through a casserole of noodles and ham. Then came a salad, cheese and coffee. Gomez sat back, apparently satisfied.

Just then a waiter came in bearing a huge oyster loaf, a solid loaf of bread which had been hollowed out and filled with oysters. But, it was rejected by the actor in front of whom it was placed for all he had ordered was a mere oyster sandwich. The waiter started back to the kitchen with the loaf.

"Hoh!" roared Gomez. "Let's not waste that. Bring it here. I will do it the justice it deserves."

So Gomez finished off the oyster loaf. It was as good a show as his Gromio in the Lunts' hilarious production of this merriest of Shakespeare's comedies.

ALL READY FOR THE FEAST

War Waste Causes Rise In Prices

By HARRY L. LUTZ
Professor of Public Finance, Princeton University.

THE war has produced a paradoxical situation with respect to prices which may be expected to become more acute as time passes.

This is the conflict between the administration's long, and on the whole unsuccessful effort to raise prices, on one hand, and its condemnation of profiteering, on the other.

It will be easy to become hysterical over so-called profiteering, and all manner of ill-advised legislative proposals may be expected. The term is so vague and indefinite as to make it a most convenient slogan for attacking any change of prices, regardless of what may be the underlying causes.

The president has recently referred to the subject on two occasions. In his radio speech of early September he said that no one had a moral right to profiteer during the war. In his address to congress he said that if his plan for revision of neutrality should lead to profiteering, it could be dealt with in the next regular session.

At the same time the department of agriculture has been issuing statements to the effect that farm prices should be raised, even above their present levels, in order to achieve the goal of parity incomes.

Since no one knows just what this "parity income" is, or should be, no one can ever prove conclusively that farm prices have risen to improper levels. Presumably the term "profiteering" is not to be applied to increases in farm prices.

* * *

ON THE other hand, those who are most certain that they know what profiteering is are confident that it will appear first and most conspicuously in the industrial field.

It is not at all improbable that any substantial rise of industrial prices will quickly be denounced as profiteering, although fairly extensive advances of farm prices will be approved as simply an approach toward parity farm prices and incomes.

War naturally and inevitably causes rising prices. It is the quickest and most effective known method of destroying the products of labor and capital. It produces a condition of such devastating scarcity as to compel immediate efforts at price readjustment to preserve a balance between demand and supply.

If all the cotton now under pledge to the government were to be burned, the price of cotton would go up. If all of the pig iron and finished steel on hand were to be dumped into Lake Michigan, steel and iron prices would rise. War consumption is the same kind of waste as burning or dumping into the sea.

* * *

PRICE increases are the normal means of stimulating greater productive effort. If prices do not rise as the war waste continues, the condition of scarcity will become still more acute. In a country of limited resources, rigid rationing is a means of keeping demand in balance with supply. In a country with substantial resources, price increase constitutes the best way of keeping supply in balance with demand.

The only point at which there may be a clear case for a charge of profiteering is that of a tight monopoly in the production of an important commodity for which there is no substitute. Under this condition the monopolists may elect to restrict production and let the prices soar.

Despite all of the talk about monopoly, there are very few, if any, cases of complete, air-tight monopoly of this sort. Few commodities of general importance have no substitutes whatever. Few producers are so entrenched as to be wholly indifferent to the rise of completing products.

In view of the present levels of wages, taxes and other costs, there is little immediate danger that industry will begin quickly to reap profits in excess of a fair investment return.

The real danger, already vaguely foreshadowed by the premature talk of profiteering, is that the public excitement may afford an excuse for federal regulation of prices. This would be like accepting Hitler in order to stem the tide of Communism.

Those administration advisers who seek destruction of enterprise have long wanted such control. If the people lose their heads in the war scare, these economic saboteurs will get their chance to Stalinize us.

Timely Editorial

Better Than Pensions.

To Governor Olson of California, the ham and egg contingent of his state and the ceaseless agitators for more pensions everywhere, one urgent suggestion ought to be made: That the time, effort and money put into campaigns for constantly higher payments of this character be diverted to campaigns in behalf of more employment for people of advancing age who could be useful to industry for many years to come.

Fortunately, there is some mention of this in California and it has been proposed elsewhere. But it is subordinated and so little stressed that virtually no results are obtained.

It would be the least expensive and the most constructive way to go about a solution of the problem. The method of pensions encourages dependence. The method of jobs would encourage self-reliance. Which is the country going to choose and demand?—Kansas City Times.

A Thanksgiving Meditation.

Editor News-Journal:

Writing upon the subject "What women can do to banish war from the world" Kathleen Norris, noted author, proposes a plan which should be universally read. The thought is that war will never be banished until injustice as between nations is minimized. Every man born into the world, is entitled not only to a place in the sun, but to his share of God's gifts, which comprehends the natural resources of the earth. It reflects no superior genius upon any nation, that an unduly large portion of oil, coal, copper, nickel, silver, gold, etc., is found within its borders and it is unjust and in conflict with Christian principles, for any nation to withhold such common blessings from other nations at will. The Pharisee thanked God that he was not as other men but had nothing of God in his makeup. If we at our safe distance from European conflagrations, thank God we are not involved, and do nothing to banish wars, we are no better than the Pharisee.

The whole European attitude toward war for centuries, has been that wars are inevitable and when ended (temporarily) the defeated must be humiliated and punished, which only sows the seeds for another war. It is generally conceded, I believe, that the Versailles treaty is largely responsible for the present war. A war ended and punishment inflicted is comparable to a parent who punishes his son with an unreasonable whipping and sows the seed of revenge in the son, and future trouble.

Europeans have not yet learned to conclude a "generous peace" with the defeated, but it is fundamentally important if world peace is ever to be attained. They scarcely understand action toward other nations from a purely altruistic motive. General Grant gave a shining example of such a spirit in his peace treaty with the Southern states at the conclusion of the Civil war.

As Miss Norris states, American women can make a real contribution to world peace by assembling representative leaders to prepare an American world map to be submitted to the leading nations, which will give every nation, land area in proportion to population and a just share of natural resources of the earth. And even if not approved and accepted at once, it will form the basis for serious thought and may develop into accomplishment in time. And, as Miss Norris adds, "After revision upon revision by other nations, when that map is accepted, every country in the world will begin to lessen military preparedness and the millions so saved, will more than balance any tariff rights or territorial concessions that we have had to sacrifice."

And Germany, Japan and Italy, regardless of leadership, are as much entitled to a just share of the natural blessings of life as England, France or America. Unless we can recognize this principle of justice, wars will continue ad finitum.

Ohio Anecdotes

No Progress.

ALTHOUGH defeated in his purpose to expound Christianity among the Ohio tribesmen, the Rev. David Jones of Pennsylvania left authentic and valuable data on the lives of the Ohio country Indian tribes.

Arriving early in 1773 in the Indian country on the Deer creek, Paint creek and Scioto river plains, intending to do missionary work, Jones was treated so brutally that he remained but a month.

Jones, who kept a detailed journal of his observations, traveled through seven towns along the west bank of the Scioto river. He met Richard Butler, who became one of the five famous Butler brothers of the American Revolution, at Kiskapoo, where Butler has established a trading house.

Jones wrote that the trader prepared wheat cakes for him, and gave him leggings with which to barter for provisions with the Indians.

Everyday Poem

Tomorrow's World.

Tomorrow's world, who can say what
Its griefs or joys may be?
We try to picture it; beyond
The veil we may not see.

Not even its dim outline can
We conjure up to view,
So many things we know naught of
Will make this world anew!

Tomorrow's world, with its strange scenes,
Mysterious must stay
And unexplored by any one
Who seeks it out today.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—There is much wailing and gnashing of teeth these days among New Dealers. The president, greatest spender of them all, has sent blunt orders down the line that all estimates for the new budget must be pared to the bone.

The boys just don't know what to make of it. They expected economy demands from congress, but for Roosevelt to wield the ax has cut them to the quick.

And they know he isn't kidding because of what he already has done to WPA. He has quietly ordered its new appropriation slashed to $1,000,000,000—a cut of $500,000,000 under the current budget. If anywhere near this percentage of economizing is imposed on other major appropriations, then the budget he will submit to congress in January will amaze his critics.

It also will be in line with the advice given him by Democratic congressional leaders.

They have urged him to cut everything but national defense sharply. If congress wants to boost his figures, that will be its responsibility. But the administration, they insist, should be on record for a balanced budget in order to meet Republican campaign attacks.

Judging from the cries of anguish among his New Deal intimates, the president is definitely acting on this counsel.

* * *

Supreme Court Battle.

THERE was a touch of the old Supreme Court fight in what Roosevelt said about the late Justice Butler, but you had to hear the words read aloud to get it.

Newsmen at Steve Early's press conference asked if the president had any comment to make on the death of the Supreme Court justice. Early had anticipated that, and was ready with a statement from the president.

He read it aloud in a quiet voice, but when he came to the line about Butler's philosophy, there was an unmistakable emphasis laid upon one word, which loaded it with meaning.

". . . his complete frankness," Early read, "in the expression of his philosophy . . . commanded my respect." Earl emphasized the word "his," an emphasis which was doubtless not his own but the president's. It left no doubt that the president's "respect" applied only to Butler's frankness, not to Butler's philosophy.

American Horse Sense.

HERE are two worthwhile quotes by two worthwhile Americans:

Norman Davis, ex-envoy for disarmament and now head of the Red Cross: "Waging peace is much more difficult than waging war."

Lloyd Stark, governor of Missouri: "We need our opponents to keep us at our best. In the two-party system lies our best guarantee that this shall never be a totalitarian state."

* * *

Inland Waterways.

THE ouster of Major General T. Q. Ashburn as head of the Inland Waterways corporation was no sudden convulsion. It was the climax of a long behind-the-scenes row between the retired army officer and commerce department officials.

First blow in the feud was struck by Ashburn, who hotly resented having his agency put under the department in last summer's government reorganization. He had been his own boss for years and didn't like being subordinated.

At the first meeting of his board after the transfer, Ashburn took the offensive by reading a legal brief challenging the legality of the shift. To Assistant Commerce Secretary J. Monroe Johnson, two-fisted South Carolinian who was getting his first close-up of the Inland Waterways corporation, this seemed a deliberate affront and he told Ashburn so in so many words.

Thereafter, Johnson lost no time in digging into the affairs of the corporation and quickly uncovered three interesting items: (1) that in addition to his $10,000 a year salary, Ashburn was getting $5,000 for personal expenses; (2) he had a government yacht that cost $20,000 a year to operate; (3) that IWC barge and river hands were up in arms over low pay and poor food.

On orders of Secretary Hopkins, Johnson put the ax to the expense fund and the yacht. Ashburn was furious.

* * *

White House Appeal.

HE RENEWED his attacks on the legality of the transfer, going over Hopkins' and Johnson's heads directly to the White House. But this move was thrown for a loss by an opinion from Attorney General Murphy holding that the president did have the power to make the shift.

Meanwhile, Johnson had started an audit of the IWC's books and a survey of labor conditions by Father Haas, a widely respected labor authority. After this the fight raged hotter than ever. Finally Johnson called in Ashburn and notified him he was through.

"You can remain until the audit is completed," Johnson said, "and then date your resignation to take effect at the end of your annual leave."

Ashburn made no reply. Rushing back to his office, he wrote out his resignation and gave it to Johnson and the press.

Although Ashburn is out, the controversy is far from over. The justice department has been asked to start proceedings to recover the $5,000 Ashburn drew yearly for personal expenses.

Merry-Go-Round.

AFTER phenagling to get the Philippines out from under Secretary Ickes and the interior department, High Commissioner Sayre has been deluging the interior department with lengthy cables enumerating things he wants done. . . . Cordell Hull and Dominican Dictator Trujillo got along together very well privately, though other members of Mr. Hull's state department don't love the Dominican. . . . Language in a Census Bureau press release: "The stork flies through census windows and makes 6,000 new entries daily, and the old gentleman who carries a scythe (who pals around with taxes) comes every day to erase about 4,000."

How It Started

"Folderol"—A Bit of Nonsense.

It is a trifle, a bauble, frivolity—all of which is indicated by the surface contemplation of this three-words-in-one.

Folderol is corrupted or run together French.

To the eye and ear are apparent the French folie and role connoting silliness or foolerie played upon a stage.

Hence the combination comes legitimately by its significance of superficiality, shallowness and a bit of nonsense.

Husking Corn

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I DROVE to a neighboring town the other morning. The crisp air had a frosty tang. Frozen strips of water in low places glistened like silver in the rising sun. The distant hills were hidden by smoke and haze. At a curve of the road two cornfields met. Both of them had rows of tall heavy shocks. Across the road, still another field was standing, tall and straight, with many of the blades blown off, making a drifted windrow along the fence.

I heard a tractor down at the farther end of this uncut field, and saw it move toward me with an all-metal corn picker hitched on behind. The pipe-like elevator stood up above the tallest stalks like a periscope, and from the slanting, shiny chute slid a constant flow of ears with a portion of the husks still on.

A truck with a deep wide bed moved along beside the picker, and caught the yellow harvest. I watched it move across the field until the truck bed was heaped full. When it pulled away a team and wagon with boards above the regular bed pulled beneath the elevator and followed after.

In the next field two teams with broad topped wagons, and six men were loading unhusked shocks. The work was heavy, but they piled the fodder even with the uprights. When these two loads were on, other wagons came. Up at the farmer's barn, the tractor-driven husker was at work. Heaps of golden corn were separated from the fodder, which was shredded and blown up into a mow through a long metal pipe.

Back in the other cornfield, across the road, a bearded, ruddy man with iron gray hair stood by a fallen shock, husking his corn by hand. He had a belt made of rope, on which was dangling scores of twine strings of just the length to tie the fodder. He wore a husking peg, and made just three sharp motions for each yellow ear which he threw out upon the heap. He husked four shocks for every pile of corn, and placed the fodder from all these in one mammoth shock.

Three adjacent fields — three methods of husking corn. My eyes, and my sympathies lingered longest upon the lonely figure of the graying man beside the shock, husking his corn by hand.
